ROOSEVELT MEN TO FIGHT HARDER

Threaten to Carry Contests for Delegates to the Convention Floor.

LESS TALK OF A BOLT

Flinn, Borah, Kellogg, and Other Leaders Won't Follow the Colonel That Far.

TAFT MANAGERS CONFIDENT

Think All the Contests Will Be Decided in His Favor—How Credentials Committee Stands.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 9.—If plans tentatively agreed upon at a meeting held this afternoon by the Roosevelt Vigilance Committee are carried out a more militant policy will be pursued in the future in connection with the hearings on contests before the Republican National Committee.

Three of the Colonel's best campaigners will sit in the meeting of the National Committee to-morrow, if the necessary proxies can be obtained. All three are fighters. Chief among them is William Flinn, boss of the Colonel's forces in Pennsylvania and Captain of the Roosevelt pretorian guard of ante-convention campaigners. Boss Flinn has been hunting for a proxy all day, as he pines for an opportunity to be in the thick of the fighting which is bound to come with the important contests which the National Committee expects to take up this week.

The other Roosevelt men who will be sent to the firing line are Gov. Walter R. Stubbs of Kansas, whose fighting qualities have been attested in three campaigns in his own State, and Francis J. Heney, the San Francisco vice hunter, who was instrumental in sending Abe Ruef to prison. Mr. Heney reached this city to-day and was enrolled at once as a member of the "Steering Committee," which was organized yesterday by Flinn.

The Colonel has had long distance telephone talks with his campaign managers here and urged upon them the necessity of doing what can be done to prevent the Republican National Committee from throwing out all of his contesting delegates.

Indiana Contests Up To-day.

First contests to be taken up to-will be those from Indiana, where the seats of the four delegates at large and eight district delegates are contested. Harrison closely in touch with the Taft managers and with the leading Taft members of the Republican National Committee predicted to-night that the committee would act in the Indiana cases as it had in the contests from Alabama, Florida, and Georgia, where all the Roosevelt contestants were thrown out and all the Taft delegates seated. There is said to be as little merit to the Roosevelt contests from Indiana as there were to those from these Southern States.

Some of the stanchest Taft men in the country are involved in the Indiana contests. Col. Harry S. New, whom President Taft selected to take charge of the arrangements for the convention and who was Chairman of the committee which chose Senator Elihu Root for Temporary Chairman, heads the Taft delegation from Indiana. The next man on the list of delegates at large is ex-Vice President Charles Warren Fairbanks, who is slated for Chairman of the Committee on Resolutions if the Taft forces dominate the temporary organization.

Ex-Congressman James E. Watson and Joseph D. Oliver are the other delegates at large, and among the district delegates is ex-Senator James A. Hemenway, who for years has made common cause with Mr. Fairbanks in the fight against the radical element among the Indiana Republicans.

On the Roosevelt side of the contests there are many headliners, too. Former United States Senator Albert J. Beveridge heads the Roosevelt contesting delegations. The other contesting delegates at large are Edwin M. Lee, former Chairman of the Indiana Central Republican Committee; Frederick Landis, and Charles H. Campbell.

It was over the result of the Indiana primaries and convention that Col. Roosevelt first raised the cry of fraud, and he has impressed upon his followers here that nothing must be left undone to prevent the National Committee from showing up this charge as hollow through its decisions in the Indiana cases.

Gov. Stubbs of Kansas said to-day that he was prepared to go into the committee and fight to the last ditch for Col. Roosevelt.

"It is just as reprehensible to steal delegates as it is to steal sheep or horses," said he. "I don't think the National Committee dare to undertake in broad light, and during a period covering five or six days, the desperate job of stealing the Presidency of the United States. If they could do it in an hour and get away it would be different. And not only that, but the Republican National Convention must give its approval to the theft before it can go into effect."

Less Talk of a Bolt.

There has been less talk to-day of a Roosevelt bolt, and more talk of fighting it out on the floor of the convention. While the Taft managers express themselves more confident than at any time that the President will be nominated on the first ballot, the Roosevelt people for the first time since the National Committee began to hear the contests are exhibiting an air of comparative assurance. It was learned to-night that while a bolt is being considered in case the National Committee should decide against all or a vast majority of the Roosevelt contestants, some of the cool heads in the Roosevelt camp have advised against such a course.

United States Senator Borah of Idaho, for instance, who is one of the leading men in the Roosevelt movement; former Deputy United States Attorney General Frank B. Kellogg of Minnesota, and Will-

STRIKE HALTS LA FRANCE.

Wanamaker Fears It Will Prevent His Seconding Taft's Nomination.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, June 9.—Owing to a strike of 500 stokers and seamen for higher pay on the liner La France, the vessel was unable to sail from Havre for New York. Officials have asked the Government to replace the strikers with stokers and sailors from warships. These are expected to arrive early on Monday. Even then it is problematical if the vessel will be able to depart before 5 in the afternoon. Meantime the officials are making arrangements to transfer passengers if necessary at Cherbourg on a German steamer.

The affair places John Wanamaker, who is a passenger on La France, in a dilemma. He promised Mr. Taft to make a speech seconding his nomination at the Chicago Convention, and he feels he may be unable to arrive in time. M. B. Osborne, a Roosevelt delegate to Chicago, another passenger on La France, is similarly affected.

BY AIRSHIP TO PATIENT.

Doctor, Whose Auto Breaks Down Taken On by Aviator.

Special to The New York Times.

HAMMONDSPORT, N. Y., June 9.—The small son of E. A. Petrie, a resident of Urbana, near here, fell down a stone stairway to-day, and his parents, believing that he had fractured his skull, telephoned to Dr. P. L. Alden, here, who promised to hurry to the Petrie home with all haste. The minutes passed, however, with the physician still not arrived, when the Petries saw a Curtiss hydroplane appear against the skyline.

The machine, at first a blurred spot against the clouds, grew rapidly more distinguishable as it sped toward the Petrie home. Its frame was outlined clearly when it was still a mile or so away, and in the seconds only which it took the machine to make this distance Mr. Petrie and his family distinguished two figures crouched in the seats between the planes.

With the whirr of its engine increasing to a roar the machine swept over their heads, circled about, and gradually sank to earth, where it ran along a short distance and then halted.

From it, his kit of surgical instruments in his hands, leaped Dr. Alden. He hurried to the Petrie home and to the bedside of the boy. After he had examined the youngster and dressed a bad cut in his head which, the physician said, was, luckily, the whole extent of the lad's injuries, he explained how he had chanced to arrive in an airship.

In response to Mr. Petrie's telephone message, he said, he had started for Urbana in his automobile, sending the machine along at full speed. When he was ten miles from Urbana his automobile broke down. He was hard at work on it when he heard the whirr of Hugh Robinson's engine and saw the aviator soaring close over his head on a trip from the Curtiss Aviation School.

Dr. Alden hailed the aviator, explaining his predicament, and begging for a lift. Robinson assisted him into the biplane, made a place for his surgical bag, and then climbed into his own seat, promising to have the physician in Urbana in less time than he could have made the trip had his automobile not broken down.

The hydroplane rose several hundred feet in the air and then Robinson headed it northward at full speed. In exactly six minutes the ten miles to Urbana were covered, and the machine was settling to earth near the Petrie home.

Robinson stayed until he learned that young Petrie was not badly hurt, and then he flew back alone.

TRAINS RUN THROUGH FIRE.

In Rushing Past Big Blaze in Bayonne Lumber Yard.

Through trains of the Central Railroad of New Jersey were forced to pass through a wall of fire to get by the lumber yards of A. W. Booth & Brother, in Linnett Street, Bayonne, N. J., yesterday afternoon, after a fire was started there, it is believed, by a spark from a passing locomotive. The wind swept the flames across the tracks, and to the thousands of spectators who gathered from other parts of Bayonne, Jersey City, and even from Port Richmond, S. I., it looked as if the trains were enveloped in flames as they shot by the lumber yards.

The fire got a good start because the water pressure proved to be poor, and Chief Alfred Davis at 3:30 o'clock, about half an hour after the fire started, sent to Jersey City and to Port Richmond for aid. Three engines came from Jersey City and one company from Port Richmond. Frederick Niebling, driver of one of the Jersey City companies, was jolted from his seat and was run over by his own engine. It is feared that he will die. Four or five other firemen were scorched by the flames, but none was hurt seriously.

The fire started in the Booth planing mill, a big frame building about 200 feet square, two stories high. From this the flames spread throughout the yard, and six freight cars on the Jersey Central siding were set on fire. Late last night the fire was still burning, though under control. It is thought that the loss will be between $200,000 and $250,000.

EIGHT U. S. SAILORS RESCUED

Men in Small Boat from the Destroyer Mayrant Capsized.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., June 9.—Capt. Charles Schoeneman, keeper of Newport Harbor lighthouse, this afternoon saw a launch containing eight sailors from the destroyer Mayrant capsize. He lowered his little boat, picked up a sailor who was swimming toward the lighthouse for assistance, and a short time later he took two others from the sea, while lifeboats from the submarine tender Castine, flagship Dixie, and repair ship Panther, picked up the others, bringing them to the naval torpedo station, where they received medical attention.

The sailors had cleared the breakwater, but as they reached the open bay a sudden squall struck their craft, capsizing it. All the sailors could swim, but they were in a perilous position and hidden from view for some time. Capt. Schoeneman last August saved five bluejackets in an oarless boat belonging to another destroyer in the harbor at 2 o'clock in the morning.

MULTITUDES CHEER THE KAISER'S SHIPS

The Great Moltke's Guns Boom a Salute to Our Flag as It Dips to the Visitors.

GREETED AS CITY'S GUESTS

German Sailors Have a Holiday—Many Visit World's Greatest Battle Cruiser—Dinner for Officers.

The squadron of three German warships sent to the United States by the Kaiser, whose flagship, the great battle-cruiser Moltke, is one of the naval wonders of the time steamed into the Hudson yesterday morning. With the visiting ships, acting as an official escort, came four mighty American battleships of the line and a flotilla of five of the fastest torpedo-boat destroyers in the world.

The escorting ships led the way into the Hudson, the German ships trailing majestically astern. At the head of the German column was the Moltke, with her knifelike prow and low freeboard, the ship that has the armament of a dreadnought and the speed of a Mauretania, a type of modern fighting craft the like of which the United States Navy cannot boast.

The German and American vessels arrived promptly on schedule time, and as they steamed up the Hudson in single column the sight was an inspiring one, the effect of which was not lost on the thousands who had gathered along the river front from Seventy-ninth Street to Grant's Tomb to witness the coming of the fleets.

All of the American ships and one of the Germans have been seen in the Hudson several times before, but not since the great British Inflexible was here have New Yorkers had the opportunity to visit and inspect a fighting ship like the Moltke. Thousands took advantage of the opportunity to visit the great battle-cruiser yesterday, and those who did not have the opportunity will have at least two other chances to boast of having been aboard the armored flier before the order is given to say good-bye on Thursday.

Entering the Harbor.

The two squadrons and the flotilla of torpedo-boat destroyers sailed from Norfolk at 3:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon, and at 8 o'clock yesterday morning Capt. Albert Gleaves, U. S. N., Commandant of the New York Navy Yard, received wireless notice that the ships would arrive off the lightship soon after 10 o'clock and that they would anchor in the Hudson between 11 o'clock and noon. At the lightship there were three Sandy Hook pilots waiting to board the German cruisers. The American ships, as is their custom, came in without the assistance of an outside pilot.

From the moment the squadrons passed out the Virginia Capes late Saturday afternoon each of the vessels had steamed at 16 knots, proceeding in three columns, with the Moltke abreast the flagship Louisiana, while to port of the Louisiana was the fast Drayton, flagboat of Lieut. Commander Kenneth M. Baker, U. S. N., commanding the torpedo-boat flotilla.

Behind the Moltke steamed in order the Stettin and the Bremen, while the Louisiana was trailed in order by her sisterships Kansas and New Hampshire, with the great dreadnought South Carolina at the end of the column. Astern of the Drayton came that little craft's sisters, the Paulding, the McCall, the Roe, and the Terry.

Off Sandy Hook the three columns slowed down for the German ships to take aboard their pilots, and then the three columns swung into single column for the entry into the harbor. The Drayton took her position at the head of the column, and, slackening her speed to fourteen knots, headed for the Battery and the Hudson. With the Drayton leading, the warships then proceeded in the following order: Paulding, McCall, Roe, Terry, Louisiana, Kansas, New Hampshire, South Carolina, Moltke, Stettin, and Bremen. From the foremast of the Moltke fluttered the pennant of Rear Admiral von Rebeur-Paschwitz, the German commander in chief, while the blue-starred pennant of Rear Admiral Cameron McR. Winslow, commanding the Second Division of the Atlantic Fleet, stretched to the breeze from the top of the forward latticework mast of that splendid fighting ship.

Soldiers Fire a Salute.

On Governors Island a detachment of soldiers from the Twenty-ninth United States Infantry was stationed near old Castle Williams, in readiness to begin firing the National salute to the German colors the moment the Moltke was in sight. The Americans steamed past in quick time, and as soon as the dreadnought South Carolina had passed the soldiers began firing.

When the German flagship was abreast of Castle Williams the big American flag at the top of the headquarters flagpole on Governors Island dipped another salute to the Kaiser's flag, a courtesy that the Moltke quickly returned. When the echo of the last of the Governors Island guns had died away the Moltke began firing another salute of twenty-one guns, this time to the American colors. The mighty ship was off the Battery before the last of her guns was fired.

In the Battery a crowd of about 5,000, perhaps half of them of German birth or descent, waved a welcome to the ships. Tugboats, ferryboats, and other harbor craft welcomed the visitors with whistles, and those that displayed the American flag dipped it as the visitors went by, and the visiting ships returned the courtesy every time, the result being that the seamen who did the dipping aboard the German ships were kept busy with the colors from the time the ships arrived in the harbor until they reached their anchorages, an hour later.

Where the Ships Anchored.

It had been expected that the American and German ships would anchor in double column, the Germans on the New York and the Americans on the New Jersey side of the river. This plan, however, was abandoned and the ships anchored in single column, the column beginning with the anchorage of the Bremen, off Seventy-eighth Street, and ending with that of the dreadnought South Carolina, near 108th Street. The Moltke is off Eighty-fifth Street and the Louisiana off Ninetieth Street.

As soon as the Louisiana anchored representatives of the committee appointed by Mayor Gaynor to arrange for the entertainment of the visitors boarded the revenue cutter Guide and proceeded to that battleship and joined Admiral Wins-

ALASKA VOLCANOS PUT SHIP IN PERIL

Passengers on Steamer Dora Nearly Suffocated by Poisonous Gases.

VILLAGES MAY BE BURIED

Mount Katmai Belched Rocks and Ashes, Which Fell for Miles Around—Shocks Felt at Cordova.

SEWARD, Alaska, June 9.—Passengers on the mail steamer Dora, which arrived from the westward to-day after passing through a shower of ashes from Mount Katmai volcano, believe that several small fishing villages on the shores of Shelikoff Strait may have been destroyed by the eruption. The revenue cutter service at Unalaska has been asked to send assistance.

Those on the steamer were nearly suffocated by poisonous gases as she passed through the falling ashes. She was in sight of Katmai when the eruption began, and those on the vessel witnessed a brilliant spectacle. It was 1 o'clock in the afternoon, and the mountain was in plain view. Subsequent earthquakes disturbed the water of the strait, when suddenly a terrific explosion occurred in the mountain, and a great mass of rocks was thrown into the air.

The first explosion was followed by others in quick succession, each seemingly more terrific than the one preceding. Soon a steady stream of rocks and ashes poured from the peak, and spread far over the surrounding country, obscuring the sun and shutting the troubled mountain from sight.

At 4 o'clock, when the Dora was seventy miles from the volcano, total darkness came and ashes began to fall in thick clouds upon the deck, covering it with a white layer three inches deep. The stifling atmosphere made the passengers violently ill. Throughout the night the Dora steamed through the dust-laden air and was rocked by the earthquakes that lashed the water, while the mountain thundered menacingly in the distance.

At 5 o'clock on Friday morning, the Dora having steamed fifty miles out of her course, clear air was reached and the passengers were able to breathe freely again. Looking back, they could see the column of smoke and ashes still pouring from the volcano.

The Dora was engulfed in darkness again Saturday as she neared Seldovia and felt her way carefully to Seward.

The volcanic disturbance was the most violent ever recorded in Alaska. It is estimated that an area of 300 square miles, much of it fertile territory, has been covered to a depth of several inches by the volcanic ash.

First evidence that the volcano was preparing to free itself from the rocks and lava that choked its throat for many years came early on Thursday, when the Alaskan Peninsula was rocked by a violent earthquake. At this time the Dora was at Cold Bay, only fifteen miles from the volcano. When the eruption began she had crossed the Shelikoff Strait to Kodiak and was proceeding on her course.

TACOMA, Wash., June 9.—Cordova, Alaska, located near the mouth of the Copper River, was awakened by the mighty rumbling and cannonading of Mounts Illamna and Redoubt, more than 200 miles away, and volcanic ashes sprinkled the streets of the town.

Mount Katmai had always been regarded as extinct. Natives had no tradition of any former activity. Illamna, Redoubt, and St. Augustine, however, have been known as smoking volcanoes. Illamna had an eruption in 1901 and 1902.

The purser of the Admiral Sampson reports Mount Illamna and Mount Redoubt, on the mainland opposite Kenai, peninsular, in active eruption, throwing out smoke, lava, and rocks. The terrified natives are flocking to the churches, thinking the end of the world is coming.

Capt. Austin E. Lathrop of Cordova, spent two years in the vicinity of the volcanoes St. Augustine, Redoubt, and Illamna. Lathrop in 1904, when prospecting near St. Augustine, saw it suddenly spurt lava and smoke. The eruption was accompanied by an earthquake shock which caused a tidal wave in Cook Inlet.

The detonations were more plainly heard at Mile Ninety-one on the Copper River & Northwestern Railroad, ninety-one miles in the interior, than at any other place.

Friends fear for the safety of the Parker-Browne expedition, which is ascending or returning from Mount McKinley.

SEATTLE, Wash., June 9.—Three slight earth shocks were recorded to-day on the seismograph at the University of Washington, indicating that volcanic disturbances in Southwestern Alaska which have agitated the instruments in observatories throughout the United States during the last three days are still in progress.

Prof. Henry Landes, geologist at the university, said the shocks recorded to-day were not as severe as those of yesterday, and this led him to believe that the eruptions are slowly subsiding.

The volcanic disturbance has paralyzed wireless communication in the north, and it is impossible to get definite information concerning conditions in Kodiak and Afognak Islands, the three most important islands in Southwestern Alaska.

KILLED BY ATTERBURY AUTO.

Vice President of Pennsylvania Railroad Held to Await Coroner's Action.

PHILADELPHIA, June 9.—Mrs. Hugh Tague was killed and her husband was fatally injured to-night when an auto owned and occupied by W. W. Atterbury, Vice President of the Pennsylvania Railroad, ran them down near their home in Villanova, a suburb.

The couple were walking along a dark stretch of the road when the machine, driven by a chauffeur, crashed into them, hurling them to the side of the road. They were placed in the automobile and hurried to the Bryn Mawr Hospital, where it was found Mrs. Tague was dead and her husband so badly injured that he cannot recover.

Mr. Atterbury and his chauffeur were held at the hospital to await the action of the Coroner.

MAYFLOWER IN PERIL WITH TAFT ABOARD

Narrowly Escapes Being Rammed by Steamer Northland in Chesapeake Bay.

YACHT'S SIGNAL A SURPRISE

Northland Gave Notice She Would Pass to Port, but Mayflower Crossed Her Bow.

OLD POINT, Va., June 9.—The Presidential yacht Mayflower, with the President and Mrs. Taft and a party of distinguished guests aboard, narrowly escaped a collision early to-day with the steamer Northland of the Norfolk and Washington Line not far from Point Lookout, where the Potomac River empties into Chesapeake Bay. Only the vigilance of the officers of the Northland and the Mayflower and their prompt action prevented what looked for a minute like an accident.

It was a perfectly still moonlight morning, with no sea running, and the lights of passing vessels could be seen for miles. The Mayflower left Washington last night about 6:30 for Hampton Roads. In addition to the President and Mrs. Taft, Gen. William Crozier, Representative F. H. Gillet of Massachusetts, Clarence H. Kelsey and Mrs. Kelsey of New York, Mrs. Francis G. Newlands, wife of the Nevada Senator, and Major T. L. Rhoads, U. S. A., and Lieut. J. W. Timmons, U. S. N., aids to the President, were invited guests.

The Northland on her regular trip to Old Point and Norfolk left Washington shortly after the Mayflower. Although she kept the Presidential yacht in sight until dark, and although she is a much speedier boat, Capt. Posey made no attempt to pass the President. Shortly after the Northland passed into Chesapeake Bay, however, where there is plenty of sea room, the officer on watch decided to forge ahead of the Mayflower. At that time the navy boat was probably a third of a mile ahead of the Northland, a few hundred yards to the starboard of the Northland's course.

The moon and plenty of bright stars made the bay almost light enough to read by, while there was hardly a puff of wind. The Northland gave a signal that she wished to pass on the Mayflower's port side, and a few seconds later came the response from the yacht, one whistle blast, meaning that she wished the Northland to pass not on the port side, but on the starboard.

Officers in the Northland's pilot house were astonished when they heard the Mayflower's one whistle, but they were even more surprised when the Mayflower began slowly to cross her bow.

A few seconds elapsed before they grasped just what was happening, but when they did, four or five sharp, short blasts shot from the Northland's whistle, meaning the seas over, "Danger, look out." The quartermaster at the Northland's wheel flung the wheel over, and the engines of the Northland were slowed down.

The Northland sheered to starboard, and the Mayflower made her way across the Northland's course, less than a thousand feet away. Once beyond the Northland's course the Mayflower seemed to slow up, and the Northland passed on her starboard quarter.

The Northland came into Old Point at 7 o'clock this morning, on time. The Mayflower dropped anchor off Fort Monroe shortly after 8 o'clock. President Taft was not told of the incident this morning, but it was discussed in the aid room of the Mayflower and among the officers of the Northland.

The President had only one engagement here to-day. With Mrs. Taft and their guests he took breakfast with Dr. H. B. Frissell of Hampton Institute, of which he is a trustee. He watched the institute battalion drill, and attended chapel, where he made a brief speech to the students, declaring:

"Although education along scientific lines is useful, vocational education for the negro, is better, for the present at least."

The President shook hands with several hundred students.

The President and his party then went aboard the U. S. S. Sylph for a forty-mile trip up the James River with a short stop at Jamestown Island, where the first English settlement in America was made 305 years ago. Leaving here on the Mayflower to-night, the President is due in Washington at noon to-morrow.

DYING SHERIFF GETS HIS MAN

Shot Through Stomach, He Pursues and Fells Italian Who Wounded Him.

While serving as a Special Deputy Sheriff in Dexter Park, Queens Borough, last night, Frederick Mergenthaler, 40 years old, of Broadway and Arlon Place, Brooklyn, was approached by a child who informed him that there was a fight going on inside. Mergenthaler hastily went to the place of the disturbance, and in an attempt to arrest Salvatore Pazarro, a clerk, of 497 Metropolitan Avenue, Brooklyn, was fatally shot in the stomach. His assailant made an attempt at flight.

The wounded deputy, however, succeeded in overtaking Pazarro and laid hold of him. When Pazarro offered further resistance the Deputy beat him over the head with his night stick until Pazarro fell unconscious. Then the deputy sank dying to the ground. Mergenthaler was dead when Dr. Halstead arrived from St. Mary's Hospital, Jamaica. The Italian, suffering from a fracture of the skull, was removed to the hospital under arrest.

The tragedy created a panic among several hundred members of the Limit Club of Williamsburg, who were enjoying an outing in the park, and it was necessary to call in the reserves from the Ozone Park Station.

DENVER, Col., June 9.—Among those who greeted William Jennings Bryan in Denver yesterday was Judge Ben B. Lindsey. The remarks passed between the Nebraskan and the Juvenile Court Judge, heard by those standing near, were unusual.

"I am glad to greet you, Mr. Bryan," said Judge Lindsey in substance. "I have been a follower of you and Mr. Roosevelt for many, many years."

"Well, you had better not follow any longer," said Mr. Bryan. "You might get cross-eyed. We are going in opposite directions."

RESCUES AMERICAN WOMAN.

Englishman Aids Her When in Perilous Position Climbing Cliff.

LONDON, June 9.—Attacked by vertigo in a perilous climb up the cliffs near Hunter's Inn, one of the beauty spots near Ilfracombe, an American woman visitor, whose name was undisclosed, was rescued by Robert Gregory of Barnstall of a party of excursionists, who saw her predicament.

She reached a point where she seemed unable either to go forward or retrace her steps. Mr. Gregory, leaving his horse in charge of his party, ascended the cliffs and found her clinging to the rocks in a state bordering on collapse, and below a sheer drop of 250 feet.

Mr. Gregory with difficulty brought her to safety.

CZAR FREES MISS MALECKA.

But She Must Leave Russia at Once and Not Return.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, June 9.—The Chronicle's Warsaw correspondent telegraphs that the Czar has pardoned Miss Kate Malecka on the condition that she leave Russia immediately and never return. She was recently sentenced to four years' penal servitude for ading Polish revolutionists. The High Court decided to return the 20,000 rubles bail raised in England.

Miss Malecka, overjoyed at the news of her release, exclaimed: "Long live England!" She felt that she owed her freedom to the British press, especially The Chronicle, which had conducted a vigorous campaign on her behalf.

Kate Malecka, daughter of an English woman and a Polish father, who had become a naturalized British subject, was sentenced the latter part of last April to four years penal servitude, after which she was to be exiled to the Siberian mines for life. She had spent more than eleven months in prison awaiting her trial.

She was charged with being affiliated with an illegal society, and was confined in a prison in Warsaw. Against this punishment she appealed to the Czar. An agitation in England was started in her behalf, based on the ground that she was a British subject. The Foreign Office was asked to use its influence to secure her instant release after her case had been discussed in the House of Commons.

As to the charge that Miss Malecka was a member of an illegal society, it was pointed out that many such societies exist, and that some of them were innocent of lawless intent, being founded for the purpose of self-improvement in the way of literary studies.

GAPE AT WOMEN WADERS.

Throngs at Atlantic City Attracted by Their Elaborate Costumes.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 9.—Young women who have taken to wading instead of bathing furnished one of the attractions along the beach here to-day. Clad in wading suits that are much more attractive than ordinary bathing costumes, those wearing them seemed to enjoy the stares of the throngs on the Boardwalk.

The costumes worn by the waders are not intended to be wet, and are therefore more delicately and elaborately trimmed than ordinary bathing suits. So far as could be learned, none of the young women who took to wading doffed ther stockings, but bathing shoes were discarded. The waders declared that the new way of enjoying an outing on the beach is far more comfortable than a swim in the breakers while the ocean remains cold.

TWO MORE AIRMEN KILLED.

Kimmerling and Passenger Fall While Trying New Monoplane in Mourmelon

MOURMELON, France, June 9.—M. Kimmerling, one of the best known aviators, and an engineer named Tonnet, who was flying with him as a passenger, were instantly killed to-day by a fall of 300 feet. Kimmerling was trying out a new monoplane. The machine was seen to oscillate violently and then it suddenly dropped straight to the ground.

Kimmerling had taken part in many important competitions, including the Paris-Rome-Turin race in May, 1911, and the European race in July of the same year, in which he finished fifth.

The double fatality, coming so quickly after that of yesterday, when Visseur was killed, has had a depressing effect among the aviators gathered here.

Kimmerling was a veteran airman of great experience, and was considered cautious. The machine was wrecked, and it was, therefore, impossible to ascertain the cause of the accident.

MEAT RIOTS IN CHICAGO.

Fifty Police Calls Sent In from West Side District.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 9.—Fifty riot calls, the result of the kosher meat strike on the West Side gave the police a busy Sunday. Hundreds of pounds of meat and crates of chickens which dealers attempted to place in front of their stores were soaked with kerosene by strike sympathizers.

West Side dealers still are attempting to sell kosher meat at increased prices, and threaten to put in big supplies from the stock yards. Residents of the quarter say that they will make trouble if the dealers do this, and plans have been made to station extra police throughout the district, to avoid further trouble.

Mrs. Clara Friedman, addressing a crowd at Halsted and Maxwell Streets, this afternoon, said: "Some of the butchers are weakening and are attempting to sell chickens at high prices. Don't buy them. We cannot afford to pay such high prices for meat and chickens. Let us live on vegetables and fruits. Boycott then butchers until they are forced to sell us meat at reasonable prices."

WEEK'S PAYROLL $1,200,000.

Wages in Pittsburgh Indicate Prosperity of the Nation.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., June 9.—The total pay roll for workingmen in the Turtle Creek and Lower Monongahela valleys for this week will be more than $1,200,000. Pay days start to-morrow, and will continue through the week until Saturday, when most of the plants pay off.

It is estimated that 50,000 men are employed at present in mills and factories in the two valleys. This number nearly equals that of 1907, the banner year in this district. This week's payroll is the largest since before the panic of 1907. All the industrial plants are booking orders rapidly, and not enough laborers or skilled workmen can be found to supply the demand.

RUSH WARSHIPS TO HAVANA

Admiral Osterhaus Ordered There with the Washington and Another Cruiser.

FEAR FELT FOR AMERICANS

Minister Beaupre Alarmed by Race Riots—No Disorder Yesterday.

LAND MARINES AT SANTIAGO

Insurgents Burn Another Town—Planters Near Varacao Call for Protection.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Admiral Hugo Osterhaus, Commander in Chief of the Atlantic Fleet, has been ordered to Havana forthwith with the armored cruiser Washington and one other warship to be picked by himself. He will proceed immediately from Key West with both vessels.

Orders for the dispatch of these two vessels to Havana were given by the Navy Department to-night in response to a request from the Secretary of State following the receipt of an alarming cablegram from Minister Beaupre at Havana, which said that the situation in Havana and its suburbs has been rapidly growing worse, and has now assumed the character of a race war. Urgent appeals for American warships have been made to Minister Beaupre by American and foreign residents of Havana and by prominent Cubans.

As soon as this dispatch was received the State Department got in touch with the Navy Department, with the result that Secretary Meyer directed Admiral Vreeland, Aid for Operations, to have two vessels sent forthwith. Admiral Vreeland sent dispatches to Admiral Osterhaus at Key West, directing him to go in person with the armored cruiser Washington, and another vessel. Admiral Vreeland added that Admiral Osterhaus would make the selection of the accompanying vessels.

Minister Beaupre's dispatch is summarized in a statement given out to-night by the State Department as follows:

A telegram was received this afternoon from Minister Beaupre representing since Friday night disorders in Havana and suburbs have assumed the character of a race war, and that last night there were anti-negro demonstrations of large proportions by irresponsible elements, and that there were clashes in every quarter of Havana and vicinity.

Minister Beaupre reports that the negroes are being goaded into violence, and that retaliation might have disastrous consequences. Americans, other foreigners, and many Cubans are apprehensive and desire the sending of an American war vessel.

Two warships have been ordered from Key West to Havana.

The State Department has decided to leave entirely to Rear Admiral Usher, commanding the fourth division of the Atlantic fleet, the disposition of the American marines who are to be employed as guards for foreign owned property in Eastern Cuba. That officer communicated to the State Department today through the Navy Department an abstract of the reports he had received from the naval and marine officers scattered throughout Oriente, and told just where each detachment of marines had been stationed.

It is felt that being on the scene and an officer of much experience, Admiral Usher should have a free hand to deal with developments without delaying to seek authorization from Washington in each case requiring action. He will, of course, be expected to consult the State Department where questions of policy are involved.

An appeal for protection came from Varacao, on the northcoast of the island, Americans and Norwegians joining in the application for guards for their plantations. As the gunboat Nashville is near by, Capt. Davis, her commander, will be instructed to extend necessary protection.

The commander of the Prairie, which was rushed to Manzanillo from Guantanamo in answer to repeated calls for help, has reported that there is not a rebel within sixty miles of the place, and that all is quiet, but the ship will be kept there for a time to reassure the plantation owners in the vicinity.

ACTION SURPRISES HAVANA.

Gomez Declines to Comment—No More Race Riots.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, June 9.—Neither President Gomez nor Secretary Ramirez would say anything officially to-night when told that two American warships had been ordered to Havana. The news was not at first believed, but was confirmed later by a dispatch from the Cuban Legation in Washington. The American Legation received the news late, and only a bare statement that two ships had been ordered here. The legation was not ordered to notify the Cuban Government and did not, but probably will on Monday on receipt of more extensive instructions from the Washington State Department.

The feeling unofficially expressed in Government circles was that Washington had been woefully misinformed regarding the occurrences of Saturday night. It was cited that only one man was killed and about a dozen injured, which is less than occurs in New York.

Chicago, or other cities in the United States frequently, not to mention the race troubles in the Southern States. Havana was quiet all day Sunday. Not one racial disturbance was reported throughout the city or suburbs.

The Havana Post to-morrow will express surprise at Washington's action. It expresses the situation exactly in saying: "The only stormy conditions in the city to-day were furnished by the elements, and the extent to which the rain was a factor in the tranquillity of the situation is problematical."

Rumors spread on Saturday that a faction of the whites intended to drive out the negroes from the parks to-night during the band concerts. These rumors were unconfirmed. On the contrary, the Cuban press branded them as untrue.

Some Americans, excited over the alarmist rumors and disorders in Havana, expressed pleasure to-night at the prospect of the visit of American warships, although admitting that the situation had not made their presence necessary. Considering the peaceful conditions of Havana and the suburbs, it is difficult to understand what disposition will be made of the marines which the warships will probably bring. They will probably remain on board unless granted shore leave. It is understood to be the intention of the United States not to intervene, but to give further demonstration of its intention to safeguard he lives and property of Americans. These have not been threatened here, nor is there any reason to believe they will be.

Among conservative Americans, there is a feeling of regret that the Washington authorities should have taken this step at this time because of the ill feeling that may be engendered between the Cubans and Americans. It is pointed out, however, that the Cuban Government will understand the move in the spirit intended and no resentment will be felt though that there will be chagrin is undeniable. The disturbance on Saturday night was participated in by irresponsible persons, mostly boys.

Presidential Secretary Ramirez sent the following letter to The Associated Press correspondent to-night:

What happened in Havana last night is without importance. Even those who serve the yellow press and who read its exaggerated reports will agree that what I say is true. You, having been present and having seen what occurred, can judge with accuracy how passions, excited by the existing propaganda in Havana and by the false news circulated, have resulted in collisions between the whites and the blacks, which the police easily quelled.

The President, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Provincial Goovernment took immediate measures for the protection of law-abiding citizens and for the punishment of the disturbers.

In general, the situation is improving in Oriente. The racial movement is disappearing and the insurgent bodies of any importance are dissolving before the constant pursuit of our soldiers. We have now in Oriente upward of 14,000 troops, including rurales, regulars, volunteers, and veterans, and the Government is dispatching more. With the suspension of the constitutional guarantees an end will be put to spying and to recruiting the rebel ranks from the various towns. Many misguided persons who took the field have returned to their homes.

I am convinced that soon the whole republic will be pacified—but not necessarily within five or six days.

This statement by the Presidential secretary was made with the approval of President Gomez.

A deluge of rain which began this morning and threatened to continue all night relieved Havana of the dreaded peril of an uprising of the whites against the negroes. The streets of the capital this evening were deserted save for patrols of mounted rurales, regular infantry, the police and home guards. There was not the least indication of disorder.

Rumors are still insistent here that intervention by the United States is immediately impending.

It was reported at Caimenera that the insurgents had attacked and burned the town of Sagua de Tanamo, on the north coast.

The United States gunboat Nashville has been ordered to that point, and will probably be replaced at Nipe Bay by a battleship, as the Cuban forces there are insufficient to protect the foreign property.

Col. Ramsay consulted this afternoon with the representatives of the foreign companies in the Guantanamo districts concerning measures for the protection of property.

The United States special service ship Culgoa landed sixty marines to-day at Santiago to protect the property of the Juragoa Iron Company. The Culgoa then proceeded to Oceana, where another detachment of marines will be stationed for the protection of property of the same company.

The insurgents have burned the railroad station at Carriera Larga, on the Guantanamo & Western Railroad. Sagua de Tana was burned by forces under Ivonet.

BRINGS MESSAGE FROM GOMEZ.

Speaker Ferrara to Request More Time to Put Down Rebellion.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, June 9.—THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent learns authoritatively that Speaker Ferrara, who is now on his way to Washington, has a special commission from President Gomez, part of which is to convince the United States authorities of the injustice of setting any short time for putting down the negro uprising. He will explain the conditions existing in Oriente Province, showing how the United States press accounts are greatly exaggerated.

The commercial aspect of the uprising is serious. Over a million dollars worth of orders from the United States alone have been canceled or withheld, pending developments, and wholesalers are not shipping goods to the country, even a short distance, owing to the uncertainty of the situation.

Reassuring news regarding Government successes to-day in Oriente considerably brightened everybody except those who are working to bring about intervention by the United States.

FERRERA TO SEE KNOX TO-DAY.

He Intimates That Financial Influences Here Seek Intervention.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Danger that intervention in Cuba may lead to a complication of our relations with the South American republics was brought up to-night informally at a dinner given by John Barrett, Director General of the Pan-American Union, at the New Willard in honor of Dr. Toledo Herrarte, Special Envoy of Guatemala to the United States, who arrived here this morning.

Nothing whatever was said at the dinner itself bearing on this question. Everything that was said in the speeches was highly complimentary of the United States, but after the guests left the tables they talked over the subject informally, and the opinion was general that, much as the South American republics might respect the United States and believe in the honor of its motives in intervening in Cuba, the effect in their own countries would be unfortunate.

Among the guests were Minister Martin Rivero of Cuba, Minister Frederico Mejia of Salvador, Minister Pedro E. Rojas of Venezuela, Minister Cartrillo of Nicaragua, Minister Joachim Mendez of Guatemala, Chairman Sulzer of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, Minister R. S. R. Hitt, the American representative at Guatemala, and Speaker Orestes Ferrera of the Cuban House of Representatives, who is here on a special diplomatic mission from President Gomez to avert intervention. Speaker Ferrera told all who discussed the matter with him that such a move would be a great mistake. He said that the reports of the revolution were much exaggerated, both as to the number of lives lost and as to the amount of damage inflicted on property. While Mr. Ferrera had carefully refrained from saying anything of the kind at the dinner he said confidentially to those who talked with him that there were certain financial influences that were at work in the United States to provoke intervention, and that these influences were supplying the rebels with arms.

This statement of Speaker Ferrera's is in line with the information which induced Senator Nelson to introduce a resolution yesterday, providing for investigation of the commercial interests which are endeavoring to incite intervention in Cuba for the purpose of annexation.

Señor Ferrera will be taken to the State Department to-morrow by Mr. Sulzer, and will discuss the subject with Secretary Knox. Mr. Sulzer will then take him to the White House, and the matter will be taken up with President Taft.

Señor Ferrera arrived here this afternoon with his wife, and refused to talk about his mission except to offer the explanation that he was here in no official way, but simply to consult physicians in regard to his wife's health and to attend to some matters of private business. While here he desired, purely in a personal and unofficial manner, to call at the State Department and see Secretary Knox for the purpose of discussing present conditions in Cuba. Señor Ferrera said that he could not tell when his visit here would terminate, but he hoped to go on to New York by the end of the week. He remained in conference with the Cuban Minister and several friends until a late hour.

Minister Rivero said to-night that he had no knowledge of the purpose of Speaker Ferrera's mission except that Mr. Ferrera was on leave of absence and had always wanted to visit Washington and New York. Asked if it were not extraordinary that a high official of the Government should quit Cuba at such a critical time unless he had a diplomatic mission, Mr. Rivero said he had no opinion to express about that.

"You know," he said, "that the proper channel for a communication between our Government and yours is through the State Department."

"But if your State Department wished to send a special envoy to the United States, would it not be apt to pick out an official of great prominence, such as the Speaker of the House?" was asked.

"I have no knowledge about that," replied the Minister.

The Minister was then asked about Minister Beaupre's dispatch concerning the negro riots.

"I don't think there is anything in it," he replied. "The press reports, which are always exaggerated, simply say that there was some shouting, and that the police dispersed the persons who were causing the turbulence. Two of the negroes, one a member of Congress and one a writer, went to see the President, and he guaranteed that there would be quiet. In all this so-called riot not one negro was attacked or injured.

"This negro affair is simply being put forward to serve as a pretext for intervention. Long before the police went to the scene of the so-called affray there was nothing but shouting, and that was all that happened when the police got there. No harm was done to anybody. It was a student affair purely."

low, who was later to escort them to the Moltke and introduce them to Admiral von Rebeur-Paschwitz, the officers of his flagship, and those of the other German vessels. The members of the Mayor's committee who made up the official welcoming party were ex-Mayor Seth Low, Chairman; J. P. Morgan, Jr., Treasurer of the committee; Herman Ridder, Chairman of the Executive Committee; Gen. Howard Carroll, Chairman of the Entertainment Committee; R. A. C. Smith, Vice Chairman of that committee; Dr. George F. Kunz, Chairman of the Official Dinner Committee; Dr. Edward Hagaman Hall, Secretary of the committee, and Police Commissioner Waldo.

Cornelius Vanderbilt and his guest, Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, boarded the Moltke in advance of the party headed by Mr. Low, going on board from Mr. Vanderbilt's yacht, the North Star.

On the Louisiana the committee was joined by Admiral Winslow, Lieut. Rufus R. Zogbaum, Jr., Flag Lieutenant of the Second Division of the Atlantic Fleet, and Lieut. Linsay H. Lacy, aid to Admiral Winslow. The committee was taken to the Moltke in the Louisiana launches. At the head of the Moltke's gangway when the committee stepped aboard stood Lieut. Prince Henry of Reuss, who was officer of the deck yesterday, and welcomed everybody who visited the ship in the afternoon. A clean-cut, democratic young man, the thirty-eighth Prince, Henry of Reuss, appeared to the visitors.

Giving the Mayor's Greeting.

The committee was immediately escorted to the quarters of Admiral von Rebeur-Paschwitz, who, with the German Ambassador and Mr. Vanderbilt, was waiting for them. The greeting between the Admiral and the official welcomers was very cordial. Admiral von Rebeur-Paschwitz has been here many times before, and several of his visitors were old friends. The Admiral was the German Naval Attaché in Washington at the time of the Spanish War, and was one of the officers with the German squadron that visited American waters for the Jamestown Exposition.

Mr. Low, speaking for Mayor Gaynor, told Admiral von Rebeur-Paschwitz that it gave the Mayor great pleasure to have him, his officers, and the crews of the ships in New York as the guests of the city, and that he was certain that all the people of New York joined the Mayor in the hearty welcome that was extended, and that the wish of the people of the city was that the visit of his squadron would prove to be one of the pleasantest in the careers of the officers and men who man the Kaiser's ships.

Mr. Low added that the transportation companies had offered free transportation to the men of the ships and that an automobile had been provided for the use of the Admiral and the commanding officers of each of the ships.

In response Admiral von Rebeur-Paschwitz said that he and his officers and the men of the German ships deeply appreciated all that had been done for their entertainment and instruction while in American waters. He referred to the honor paid his ships by the President, who went to Norfolk and inspected the great Moltke from stem to stem, and who on his return to Washington had the Admiral and his staff as his guests at dinner at the White House. The Admiral said the honors and courtesies paid them meant a direct appreciation of the friendship of the Kaiser for the United States.

After the brief official welcoming ceremonies the occasion became a very informal one, the members of the committee and the German officers strolling about the ship and chatting. The German officers referred to Riverside Drive as the most beautiful roadway of its kind in the world and those who were of the party that visited the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis last week spoke enthusiastically of that institution. They referred to the beauty of Washington, of the great landlocked harbor at Hampton Roads, and spoke admiringly of the great American dreadnoughts that were assembled in Hampton Roads when the German Squadron arrived there last week.

The stay on board the Moltke lasted about an hour and just before the committee left a small army of photographers who had boarded the Moltke requested a few poses. The request was smilingly granted by Admiral von Rebeur-Paschwitz and Mr. Low. First the Admiral and his aids, Admiral Winslow and his staff, and the representatives of the Mayor's Committee were posed on the gun deck. The photographers caused much amusement by the way they went about taking their pictures.

"Admiral, kindly look a little more this way," or "Mr. Morgan, tilt your head just a bit higher," or "will Mr. Vanderbilt please stand a little straighter," or "Mr. Low, you get nearer the middle," were samples of photographic orders given.

The German Ambassador and Mr. Vanderbilt started the exodus by leaving for the North Star. As the Ambassador left the ships the saluting three-pounders of the Moltke boomed fifteen guns in his honor. That was the only salute fired in the Hudson yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Low and the other members of the Mayor's Committee left immediately after the Ambassador in the revenue cutter Guide, while Admiral Winslow and his aids returned to the Louisiana in Admiral Winslow's launch. After the official visitors had gone several delegations of German societies were received on the Moltke and many of them found old friends among the officers of the visiting ships.

The Public Has Its Chance.

At 4 P. M. the Moltke and the other German ships were opened to public inspection and immediately the shore launches started in for a rushing business. The boat problem was never so well handled, for on the shore were representatives of the Dock Department and the United States Steamboat Inspection Service, who saw to it that the regulations governing the operation of the private launches were strictly adhered to. Each launch bore a number in big, black letters, and underneath that number was another big sign stating exactly how many passengers that particular boat could carry safely, and not one passenger above the allotted number was permitted to board any of them.

Then none of the boatmen was allowed to sell round-trip tickets. Each ticket by any boat was 25 cents each way, and any boatman who violated the rule knew that he would immediately lose his license.

There were as many women and girls in the crowd that visited the Moltke as there were men and boys, and a large proportion of them of German birth or descent. Everybody had a good time on the great cruiser, and there was every opportunity for all to see the great ship. The junior officers of the ship were all on the ship explaining all about the five big turrets, each mounting a pair of 11.3-inch guns.

They showed the visitors the searchlights, the quarters of the crew, the afterdeck, which is the Admiral's own, and which was roped off from the curious, but if anybody failed to see about all there was to see about the Moltke it was his or her own fault.

Many of the women wanted to see Prince Henry of Reuss, and some of them asked the Officer of the Deck to point out that young man, not knowing the the officer who stood at the head of the gangway was the Prince himself. The Prince sometimes pleaded guilty to the title, and sometimes, with a twinkle in his eye, he would look the other way, indicating that somewhere in the crew in this or that part of the ship was Henry of Reuss.

Nobody had asked to see the Admiral, but when he showed himself on deck everybody knew that he was the commander in chief. The gold braid and the deference with which he was treated by officers and men indicated more plainly than words could that he was supreme aboard the Moltke.

The visitors were loath to leave the Moltke, and when visiting hours ended at 6 P. M. a big crowd was still on board. The Stettin and the Bremen were also open to visitors, but neither entertained very large crowds.

On shore a crowd that extended along Riverside Drive from Seventy-ninth Street to Grant's Tomb viewed the ships at anchor.

At the foot of Seventy-ninth Street on the river side of the railroad tracks to Eighty-third Street, and on the piers at Seventy-ninth and Eightieth Streets were the largest throngs. In this territory the souvenir card man and the souvenir flag seller were everywhere in evidence. The frankfurter man was there, and the ice cream man and the peanut man. Near the official landing for the officers of the ships, which is at the foot of Eightieth Street, a dozen taxicabs were assembled for the use of the visiting officers.

All afternoon the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument at Ninetieth Street was black with people, for from that point there was the best land view of the warships.

The excursion boats also did a rushing business and a fleet of them sailed around the American and German warships all afternoon.

Positions of the Warships.

The German and American ships are anchored at these points:

Bremen, Commander Seebohm.—Off Seventy-eighth Street.

Stettin, Commander Zenker.—Off Eightieth Street.

Terry, Lieut. John C. Fremont.

The naval tender Yankton of the Atlantic fleet is also in the Hudson and is anchored on the Jersey side between the Louisiana and the Moltke.

Last night Admiral von Rebeur-Paschwitz, his aids, the commanders of the Moltke, Bremen and Stettin, and twenty other German officers, together with Admiral Winslow, his aids, and the commanders of the American battleships, were guests at a dinner at the clubhouse of the Deutscher Verein, 112 Central Park South. The German Ambassador, Capt. Severin, and Lieut., the Baron von Schmettan of the German Army, who are making the visit to America on the Moltke by direction of the Kaiser, were also at the dinner. These officers are both of the Von Moltke Regiment of infantry of the German Army.

Two hundred and twenty guests and members of the club were present. President Reinhard Siedenberg of the Deutscher Verein was toastmaster. The clubhouse was elaborately decorated. German and American flags hung about the walls.

Count von Bernstorff made a brief address in English, in which he spoke of the good feeling existing between America and Germany and of his wife German by

SAYS FLINN WON'T JOIN IN A BOLT

Taft Leader Declares Pennsylvania Boss Won't Endanger His Victory Over Penrose.

SHOWN BY STAND ON ROOT

Roosevelt, It Is Declared, Has Been Used as a Stalking Horse by Politicians to Strengthen Themselves.

A local Republican leader who is prominent both in the State and National councils of his party said yesterday that the Roosevelt forces at Chicago were badly demoralized by their failure to control the National Committee in the matter of contested delegations.

"I have positive information," said the speaker, who is a strong Taft man, "that Col. Roosevelt's apparently weak and vacillating attitude is due to the flat refusal on the part of some of his chief supporters to stand by him in the high-handed policy he was anxious to pursue. When Senator Root's name was first suggested as Temporary Chairman the Colonel announced flatfooted that he was not acceptable and that the so-called progressive forces would make a fight against his selection on the floor of the convention. Forty-eight hours later Col. Roosevelt announced that the matter of the Temporary Chairmanship was not one for serious consideration and that his followers would content themselves with seeking to gain control of the permanent organization of the convention. The very day after this apparent yielding on his part the Colonel announced that the naming of Root would be fought from the opening of the convention.

"The answer to the enigma is that Mr. Roosevelt is not the dictator that he was four years ago. He has been used as a stalking horse in various Republican States, notably Pennsylvania and Ohio, where there were factional fights within the party and a group of disgruntled politicians was seeking to gain control of the State machine. This was especially true in Pennsylvania, where ex-Senator Flinn had been ousted from control in Pittsburgh and was anxious to unseat the Penrose organization.

"No one who knows 'Boss' Flinn has ever accused him of being a progressive. As a matter of fact he was a minor spoke in the old Quay machine at a time when machine politics were really worthy of condemnation. As has been true in other States, Col. Roosevelt was quite willing to accept the support of a discredited 'boss' in order to further his own political ambitions, and so far as Flinn is concerned, he was quite willing to line up with the Colonel in order to lend dignity to his fight against the Penrose organization.

"Every person familiar with Pennsylvania politics knows that the Republican organization in recent years in that State has been clean. The only reason which Col. Roosevelt had for his fight was his own selfish ambition for a third term. He raised the cry 'Down with the bosses,' and that brought Flinn and his crowd to his heels.

"The result has been that the former State Senator from Pittsburgh is to-day in control of the new State Committee elected at the recent primaries. The organization has not been put out of business; it has simply changed hands.

"When Col. Roosevelt first announced his opposition to the selection of Senator Root by the sub-committee of the National Committee for the position of Temporary Chairman, he received a brusque intimation from Senator Flinn that the Pennsylvania delegates would not support him in such a fight. Then Mr. Roosevelt reluctantly withdrew his first declaration of war. But in the meantime pressure was brought to bear upon Flinn by some of his own lieutenants, who were enthusiastic in their belief that the National Committee could be bulldozed in the matter of contests, and that Mr. Root could be forced to withdraw. That is the real story of Col. Roosevelt's second change of front.

"The first day's hearing of contests before the National Committee showed that that body would stand firm, and immediately the Roosevelt forces at Chicago began to grumble and intimations were heard on every side, which were not contradicted by the Colonel himself, that there would be a bolt from the convention. It was then that Senator Flinn jumped into the fight. His presence in Chicago was heralded as the beginning of a bitter fight on the part of the Roosevelt forces against the regular organization. As a matter of fact, it is the beginning of a split in the ranks of the Roosevelt supporters themselves.

"Senator Flinn is too astute and experienced a politician not to realize that his newly acquired State leadership in Pennsylvania will be endangered should he countenance any irregularity at Chicago on the part of his delegates. He does not intend to jeopardize his State ticket by any quixotic fidelity to Col. Roosevelt. His real mission in Chicago is to intimate to the gathering Roosevelt leaders from other States that he will not countenance a bolt from the regular convention, and that the battle for the nomination must be fought out on the floor of the convention and before the National Committee.

"In this determination," continued the speaker, "Senator Flinn has the support of the various newly elected Roosevelt State Committeemen in Ohio, where the new machine is unwilling to risk a State election by joining a forlorn hope movement in Chicago. The whole thing means that the beginning of a Roosevelt fizzle is at hand, and that if any attempt is made by the Colonel's friends to lead a bolt in the convention, they will not have a large enough following to lend any dignity to their action. As a matter of fact, I do not believe that Col. Roosevelt would lend his name to any such rump convention unless the delegations from Ohio and Pennsylvania participated in it, and this, I have been assured on excellent authority, they will not do."

When Col. Roosevelt was informed last night at Oyster Bay of the report that Senator Flinn would confine his support of the Colonel's candidacy to a fight on the floor of the convention and would refuse to participate in a bolt should such a movement be precipitated, he smiled and retorted, "The whole story is utter nonsense."

The Colonel asserted that Senator Flinn was in Chicago in his interest and would prove loyal. He refused to discuss the possibility or probability of a bolt on the part of his delegates in the convention.

MAKES PLEA FOR RESTRAINT.

President Taylor of Vassar Warns Against Attacks on Judiciary.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 9.—Declaring that the crying sin of American life is lawlessness, and deploring the tendency toward class hatred, Dr. James Monroe Taylor, President of Vassar College, in his baccalaureate sermon to-day, declared that the duty of the educated classes was to teach restraint. He deplored the attacks upon the laws and the Judges and legislators as a result of the growing unrest, and said that the reforms demanded could only be attained by deliberate methods.

"What do we gain by impatient zeal?" asked Dr. Taylor. "Striving for immediate results in education seems to result either in narrower training or in the cramming of children with knowledge which is confusing and a hindrance to all normal development. In legislation it seems to result in leading us to trust to laws instead of educating the people in principles of life, and our haste in lawmaking is revenged upon us by reactions that leave us in worse condition than before.

"The practice of the law itself, by bad methods, red tape, technicalities that defeat justice, and inexcusable delays, has a vast deal to answer for, but if it were tenfold worse it could not excuse the teaching and example of lawlessness which attacks courts and Judges without restraint, and which sets up its own standards against them. This indiscriminate abuse of Judges is too like the lynch law which defiles our country. Thus have enmities been aroused that will make adjustment almost impossible until education and religion can do better work, or until revolution destroys and we begin all over the slow march upward. Such talk, not infrequent from our colleges, is but a step to anarchy and revolution."

Dr. Taylor spoke of the work of the Christian Association, of the fight against the hookworm in the South, the efforts to encourage agriculture, and added that they "say more for the real good of the country than all the speeches of our Presidential aspirants; these are of vastly greater account than Flinn's contest with Penrose or the schemes of Barnes and McHarg."

Night Service Called Off After Bomb Shatters Trolley's Windows in Back Bay.

Union Men Issue Statement Declaring Satisfaction with Situation—Wellesley Girls to Aid Employes.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, June 9.—Surface car service was abandoned by the Boston Elevated to-night, although a few cars were kept moving on some of the in-city lines until 11 o'clock. At that hour an explosion of what is supposed to have been a bomb shattered the window of a car in Commonwealth Avenue, Back Bay, and shook up the passengers. Several women complained of minor injuries.

The car was not so badly damaged that it could not proceed into the city, but the elevated officials promptly shut down all attempts at further service, carrying out their threat to do so if violence was used by strike sympathizers.

Minor disturbances had taken place all through the day, crowds gathering and stoning cars in Charlestown, Everett, Medford, and Roxbury.

The car barns were guarded by large forces and the different city routes were well policed, but near the Mission Church, on the Dudley Street terminal-Brookline line, there were disturbances all day, stones shattering the windows of many cars and crews being dragged from cars and beaten.

Some minor acts of violence in various sections were reported during the early evening. In Dorchester Street, in South Boston, at a point where the street lights had become extinguished, a gang took a motorman and conductor from a car about 8 o'clock and handled them roughly. In Roxbury, beyond Dudley Street, stones were thrown at an elevated train from a house in the vicinity of Bartlett Street. Windows in the train were smashed, but no one was injured, so far as could be learned. Usually two policemen were to be found on all cars running either on the surface, underground, or on the elevated structure during the evening and night.

The Boston Central Labor Union at a secret session to-day formulated plans to assist the strikers and officially sanctioned the strike. At various other union meetings sanction was given the strike and resolutions passed asking union men and their families not to ride on the cars while the strike is in progress.

Deserters from the ranks of strikebreakers were reported as numerous and many accessions to the ranks of the strikers came from men who had remained in the employ of the company up to to-day.

The deserting strikebreakers to-night brought word to union headquarters that the professional breakers brought here from New York were carrying arms.

A mass meeting has been called by the unionists for Faneuil Hall on Tuesday at 2 o'clock, and it was stated that President Gompers of the Federation of Labor was expected to be present to aid in planning for the successful carrying on of the strike. A statement issued from union headquarters said:

> The strike is progressing satisfactorily. The strikers are stronger than ever, and we are more confident of victory than at the start. Eighty per cent of the elevated company's employes have gone out. Cars are being run by division Superintendents, starters, car barn bosses, and strikebreakers.

An official statement issued by the company said:

> We do not see how any one can call this a strike, for we have the power, we have the cars, and we have the men to run them on schedule time, providing we get the protection our service deserves. We have no criticism to make of the Boston police, for they are doing all they can to preserve order, but there are not enough policemen to protect our cars. If there were, we would show the public that we are able to run every car on the entire system.

President D. Mahon, National Organizer Fred Fay, and other union officers made a tour of the city and addressed meetings of strikers in various divisions. The men were urged to remain loyal to the union cause and to use persuasion in endeavoring to swell their ranks, but were appealed to not to resort to force or lawlessness.

Special trains are being run by the Boston & Maine, Boston & Albany, and New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroads to provide for the greatly increased traffic on these lines as a result of the strike.

Wellesley College students to the number of 100 have agreed not to ride on the elevated railway cars when they visit Boston during the strike, and the money saved thus will be given to the strike fund. The members of the Woman's Trades Union League are active in the campaign at the college, and Profs. Vida D. Scudder and Emily Balch are directing the work. The girls will wear a button bearing the words "Brothers All," "Hands Across the Tracks," and "We Walk to Help Organize the Carmen."

Trying to Dodge Two Women, Touring Car Bumps Into a Turkish Tourist.

KNOCKS HIM UNDER FIRE AUTO

In Trying to Dodge Him the Fire Auto Bumps the Touring Car—Tourist Now in Hospital.

A touring car, a Fire Department automobile, two women, and a Turkish tourist all tried to pass the corner at Fifth Avenue and Sixty-seventh Street at the same time about 10:30 o'clock last night, and as a result Constantine Madias, the tourist, is in the Presbyterian Hospital with a dislocated right hip.

The touring car, which was owned and operated by Henry Webber of 1,034 Hoe Avenue, the Bronx, was speeding northward on Fifth Avenue. With Mr. Webber in the front seat of the car was his daughter Grace. Just as the Webber touring car reached Sixty-seventh Street, the Fire Department auto, driven by John Corrigan, came toward Fifth Avenue through Sixty-seventh Street from Fire Headquarters. Corrigan was taking the auto down to the Great Jones Street headquarters, and started to turn southward along Fifth Avenue.

The two automobiles could have avoided each other easily. But just as they were about to pass each other, Mr. Webber noticed two women trying to cross in front of him from the west side of the street. Instinctively he swung his car to the right, and this brought him close to the Fire Department automobile. At the same instant Corrigan, in the latter machine, saw Madias right in the centre of Fifth Avenue, crossing toward the park. Corrigan tried to avoid striking the Turk by swinging his car toward the west side of the street, but Madias in dodging was struck by Mr. Webber's machine and knocked under the Fire Department auto, which in turn struck the Webber car in the side.

At first it was believed that the Fire Department auto had passed completely over the body of Madias, but when, with the assistance of Policeman McCarty of the East Sixty-seventh Street Station, it was backed off, the Turk was found to have been lying in front of the front wheels.

His right hip was dislocated, but he was not otherwise hurt. Corrigan took him to the Presbyterian Hospital in the Fire Department automobile. He said there that he had been traveling in this country for the last three months; that he was 29 years old and lived at 312 West Thirty-sixth Street. Miss Webber and her father got out of their touring car and gave the injured man all the help they could before it was decided to take him to the hospital in the Fire Department automobile.

lam Flinn of Pennsylvania have told their friends in so many words that they are Republicans and mean to stay Republicans and that the Colonel need expect no support from them in case he should choose to run for President as the standard bearer of a third party. These three men and other men in the Roosevelt camp, who have had practical experience in politics laugh when a bolt is suggested.

"There will be no occasion for a bolt. The Colonel will win. The National Committee is not the National Convention, are the rejoinders that fall from the lips of political leaders among the Roosevelt forces when the third party proposal is under discussion.

On the other hand, it seems clear that the Republican National Committee intends to stay pat for President Taft, and as the committee will make up the temporary roll of the convention, the very delegates which the Roosevelt people would be compelled to disqualify in order [illegible] ing chance would sit in the convention, and in the [illegible] anization and vote for [illegible]

[illegible] said one of the Roosevelt men to-night, "that if the National Committee throws out all our delegates it will be a tough job to undo the work in the convention. But it is not impossible. We will control several State delegations and will have our say in proportion to the number of delegations we control about who shall go on the committee on contested seats."

Each State is entitled to one seat on each of the working committees appointed under the temporary organization. The delegation from each State selects one of its members in caucus to represent it on each of the committees. A Taft delegation, under this system, of course would select a Taft man, a Roosevelt delegation a Roosevelt man.

The ten seats in the doubtful column represent States where contests are pending which the National Committee has not as yet passed on. States with a divided delegation, like Iowa, where ten of the delegates are for Cummins and sixteen for Taft, and North Dakota and Wisconsin, where the delegates have been pledged to United States Senator La Follette.

Both After La Follette's Men.

In connection with this, it was learned to-night that both the Taft and Roosevelt forces are negotiating with Cummins and La Follette, who together control 46 delegates. By the time the convention meets these two minor candidates in all probability will hold the balance of power.

Of course the findings of the Committee on Contested Seats is subject to the approval of the entire convention. Here the Roosevelt people see an opportunity for a spectacular and possibly a winning fight on the floor of the convention, for, even with a committee controlled by the Taft people, the Roosevelt forces will have an opportunity to take the fight to the floor of the convention through a minority report.

One phase of the contests which is being very generally discussed to-night is the ready acquiescence of the Roosevelt members on the National Committee in the findings against the Colonel's contesting delegates from Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, and Georgia. In all except a few cases the Roosevelt members voted with the Taft members to seat the Taft delegates. This led to a rumor this morning that the Roosevelt campaign managers had decided to abandon the contests before the National Committee as useless.

Dixon Admits Weakness.

"Of course we do not propose to do any such thing," said Senator Dixon, the Colonel's campaign manager. "Every contest will be presented by us. If a majority of the National Committee is prepared to deliberately unseat Roosevelt delegates, as the Taft managers insist they will do, we are going to see that the robbery is committed in the open daylight and in full view of ninety million American citizens.

"It is perfectly apparent that the Taft managers have under perfect control enough members of the National Committee to do exactly as they please regarding the remainder of the contests, nearly all of which are from Republican States of the North and West. The Taft managers brazenly assert that they intend to unseat enough of the Roosevelt delegates, regardless of all facts, in order to try and get temporary control of the convention. So far the contests that have been presented have been from Democratic States in the South, where there is no hope of a single Republican electoral vote."

Square Deal for Roosevelt.

The belief among the friends of Col. Roosevelt is that the National Committee will be more cautious when it comes to handling contests in such States as South Dakota, Washington, Missouri, and California.

Senators W. Murray Crane and Boies Penrose, ex-Congressman McKinley, National Committeeman Mulvane of Kansas, and a number of other Taft leaders, met to-day and canvassed the situation. As a result of this meeting, it was reported that the Colonel's friends would have every opportunity to prove the merit of their claims in regard to the contests from these States. At any rate, the Roosevelt men on the National Committee are prepared to fight hard to have their delegates from these States saeted.

A curious report is in circulation growing out of the virtual lying down of the Roosevelt men on the National Committee in the Southern contests heard and decided last week. As this rumor would have it the agents who have been traveling in the South in the Colonel's interest during the last few weeks have given fully as much attention to missionary work among the colored delegates pledged to President Taft as they have to the work of organizing contesting delegations.

As a result it was said that Ormsby McHarg, in many instances, did not care which set of delegates was seated, and that the Taft leaders may find themselves with delegates who are for Col. Roosevelt at heart when there was every reason to believe that the delegates seated were for President Taft.

The Taft forces to-day organized a vigilance committee on the lines of the committee organized for Col. Roosevelt yesterday. Joseph B. Kealing, the Republican boss of Indiana, is Chairman of the committee. Senators Crane and Penrose, William Barnes, Jr., Gov. Meade of Vermont, Harry Daugherty of Ohio, Otto Stiefel of Missouri, Ralph Cameron of Arizona, Rudolph Ullman of Connecticut, and T. A. Marlowe of Montana are the other members.

At a meeting to-day of a majority of the Taft members of the National Committee, the outburst made by Col. Roosevelt over the decision in the Ninth Alabama contest, which he described as robbery, was taken up. After some discussion the committee decided not to make any reply to the Colonel.

"We are going to stand on our actions, regardless of the remarks of persons who are prejudiced and unfair," said one Taft member. "The work speaks for itself, and that is all there is to it. There is but one way to handle unreasonable people, and that is to ignore them."

Roosevelt Ready to Go.

After a meeting of a group of Roosevelt managers unofficially it was announced Col. Roosevelt would arrive in Chicago either by the middle or latter part of the week, but they declined to name the exact day.

Walter F. Brown of Toledo, Chairman of the Republican State Central Committee in Ohio and a Roosevelt leader, departed from Chicago for the East to-day, and it was reported that he had gone to Oyster Bay to confer with Col. Roosevelt regarding the developments of the last twenty-four hours in the convention situation.

COLONEL PREPARES FOR TO-DAY

Expects to Win in Several of the Contests Coming Up in Chicago.

Special to The New York Times.

OYSTER BAY, L. I., June 9.—Col. Roosevelt spent the day at Sagamore Hill conferring with his managers in Chicago by telegraph and long-distance telephone and getting things in shape for a renewal of the fight before the National Committee to-morrow. The Colonel believes that he should win in several of the contests which will probably be considered to-morrow, and he intends that a hard struggle shall be made.

Theh Colonel refused to discuss the National Committee situation to-day, telling the reporters that he thought he had given out a pretty definite statement last night. "There is not a thing more I can add now," he declared.

In the day the Colonel was in communication with Controller Prendergast of New York, who is slated to make the speech nominating him at the National Convention. It has been said that Mr. Prendergast is too ill to appear, but now Col. Roosevelt expects him to be on hand at Chicago and put his name before the delegates. In the event that Mr. Prendergast cannot do so, it was learned to-day, the address nominating the Colonel will be made by Patrick W. Cullinan, an alternate elected in Wilbur Mott's district in Western New York.

Col. Roosevelt's visitors to-day included ex-Congressman Richmond Pearson of North Carolina, Truxton Beale, a delegate from California, and Lucien L. Bonheur, President of the Cercle Dramatique of New York. Mr. Pearson will make one of the addresses at Chicago, seconding the nomination of Col. Roosevelt. He came here to talk over his speech.

Again the Colonel was asked about his plans to-day, and again he declared that he did not know whether he was going to Chicago or not. He seemed inclined to think he would not go.

"I have no present intention of going; I don't want to go unless I have to, and at present I don't believe I shall go," he said.

The Colonel was told that a newspaper had published a report that he had accepted an invitation to speak before a meeting of Veterans in Chicago on Thursday.

"Well, that seems to be definite proof," replied the Colonel, and laughingly added: "With my Machiavellian disposition I have concealed that even from myself."

The Colonel was in the best of humor to-day, and seemed more confident than ever that he would be nominated. He laughed and chatted with the reporters for several minutes. In referring to the visit paid to him by Pearson, he said:

"Pearson, after attending the Princeton-Yale baseball game and attending to other serious duties, came on here to talk over the less important subject of a Presidential nomination."

He also retold the story of the Bardell trial from "Pickwick Papers" to illustrate his point that about everything he said or didn't say was seized upon by some of his opponents to show that he had "perjured himself."

A report that George W. Perkins was on his way here from Chicago to talk things over with him and urge him to go to Chicago was also called to the Colonel's attention. He replied that he had received no word that Mr. Perkins was to pay him a visit.

"At any rate, he is not here now," he concluded.

Just before he brought the interview to a close the Colonel introduced Mr. Bonheur to the reporters, and Mr. Bonheur, with the Colonel's approval, gave out this statement:

"When Theodore Roosevelt first announced his decision to become a candidate for the Presidency, those of us who came out for him did it more as a matter of loyalty than anything else. We did not believe that he could win, but we felt that it would be a good thing for the party, then dying under the leadership of Mr. Taft. It was hard on New York, especially in the club, in financial, in business centres to acknowledge fealty to Theodore Roosevelt. But the victories at the primaries showed that, after all, we who had followed him from the first were in the right.

"Who doubts for a minute that if preferential primaries were held in New York to-day Roosevelt would be chosen? Will all the victories won by the people amount to nothing? Are we going to be driven to the slaughter in November in this State by William Barnes, Jr., and Otto T. Bannard? During the last three months here in New York it was the Taft men who swore they would bolt if Roosevelt were nominated. The Roosevelt men have always said that they would vote for the nominee of the party, and they will if he is regularly nominated and not fraudulently forced upon us by Barnes and his cohorts.

"Where are the leaders who followed Roosevelt in 1910, who unhorsed Woodruff and Barnes then? Where is Herbert Parsons? Where is Otto T. Bannard Where is Lloyd Griscom? Were their preachings of honesty in politics only a reflection of the association with Roosevelt?

"Three months ago everybody was saying that Taft could be nominated, but not elected; Roosevelt could be elected, but wouldn't be nominated. Roosevelt showed by his victories at the primaries that he could be nominated. Will the bosses cheat us of both the nomination and election? We shall not submit without a strong protest."

FLOODS A ROOSEVELT ISSUE.

The Colonel Promises to Harness the Mississippi if Elected President.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 9.—The Mississippi floods have been taken up as an ante-convention campaign issue by Col. Roosevelt. The Roosevelt headquarters here made public to-night a letter from the Colonel to L. S. Lake of Bunty, Tenn., in which the Colonel promises that, if elected President, he will set on foot a thorough investigation of the Mississippi watershed problem.

The Colonel points out that the river flows through a number of States, but that it would be futile to expect these States to do anything to control or prevent the floods that afflict the States of Louisiana and Mississippi through the river's overflow anad destruction of the levees. The duty, the Colonel declares, is a National duty, though it must be performed in the closest co-operation with the States immediately concerned. The levee system, Col. Roosevelt declares, cannot longer be depended upon to protect the lands bordering the river. The recent floods, the Colonel holds, have proved that.

Col. Roosevelt also says that the Mississippi, if properly used, would help solve the cost of living by competing with the railroads in transporting merchandise.

His letter says in part:

> In the Lower Mississippi Valley there are over thirty million acres of swamp and overflow lands needing drainage before homes can be established upon them. At the outset this area would, if reclaimed, support a million families, and the new land thus offered for settlement would at once check or greatly retard the tendency toward emigration to Canada and elsewhere.
>
> No small part of the plan which I propose to have prepared and carried out will relate to the Lake-to-the-Gulf deep waterway. Such a waterway would not and should not involve any excess draft on the waters of Lake Michigan, as has sometimes been feared. On the other hand, the effect of making the Mississippi Valley an arm of the sea would be to open the benefits of the Panama Canal on the cheapest and easiest terms to the whole interior of the United States, and to bring our people into closer and more productive touch with the people of Central and South America than would otherwise be possible.
>
> The cost of such a plan is by no means prohibitive. The State of New York is already spending over $100,000,000 for a canal, while the fourteen-foot waterway board of the army engineers estimated that it will cost only about $160,000,000 for a fourteen-foot channel from the mouth of the Mississippi to the end of the Chicago drainage canal.
>
> The machinery and the trained force brought together for the Panama Canal would be ready and available for this work, and for the other engineering problems involved in the great task of controlling the Mississippi and its tributaries for the general good.
>
> On many of the headwaters the cost of storage reservoirs would be much more than repaid by the value of the water power developed. Indeed, it seems certain that the total cost of preventing floods and developing the rivers of the Mississippi Valley for navigation and other uses would be so largely met by the cash returns that the burden to the people of the Nation would in the end be insignificant.
>
> As I have said repeatedly, the typical policy of my Administration was the conservation policy. There is no more important piece of conservation work to be undertaken in the United States than the control and development of the Mississippi River and its tributaries. Faithfully yours,
>
> THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

The Republican National Committee in the early part of this week will decide contests brought by the Colonel's friends from Louisiana and Mississippi.

FLINN SUMMONS HIS AIDS.

Calls Quay, Murphy, and Other Pennsylvanians to Chicago.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, June 9.—To aid the fight for Roosevelt at the Republican National Convention, ex-Senator William Flinn of Pittsburgh has summoned a number of Pennsylvania delegates to Chicago at once. Among those called are former Senator John T. Murphy of this city, Richard R. Quay, and W. H. Coleman of Pittsburgh, A. C. Sickles of Berwick, Mayor Von Bergen of Scranton, W. S. Baldridge of Hollidaysburg, Thomas R. Edwards of Shenandoah, and John G. Green of Westchester. They will leave for Chicago on Wednesday.

"All that we are going to Chicago for is to see that we get a square deal for the people of the United States," said Mr. Murphy to-day. "We will get that, for the Taft forces will realize that they cannot steal the nomination without wrecking the party.

"I know that there are influential organization politicians in this State who have written to Senator Penrose asking him to use his influence for the Roosevelt movement. These men realize that their political existence depends upon the election of Roosevelt, and wish to prevent Penrose from making a fatal mistake."

DEMONSTRATION FOR CUMMINS.

A Thousand Boomers Ready to Whoop It Up for the Senator.

DES MOINES, Iowa, June 9.—"Everything is ready for a big Cummins demonstration in Chicago on fifteen minutes' notice," said Charles Wilcox, a member of the committee in charge of the interests of Senator Albert B. Cummins before the National Republican Committee, who returned to-night from Chicago.

"The Cummins for President Club has enrolled more than 1,000 members during the last week," added Mr. Wilcox. "If the conditions never look right for Cummins, no demonstration will be made, but every arrangement, including bands and marching uniforms for hundreds, has been seen to in case they are needed."

Senator Kenyon, who is heading the committee in charge of Mr. Cummins's interests, started for Chicago to-night.

FRENCH OAKS WON BY BELMONT ENTRY

The American-Owned Favorite Flashes to Front When Leader's Jockey Blunders.

NEW STYLES AT THE TRACK

Skirts are Cut Shorter and the Hats Are Smaller, with Trimmings Only of Osprey.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, June 9.—The "French Oaks," as the Prix de Diane is called, which was run to-day at Chantilly, provided two of the most extraordinary results of the racing season. Edmond Blanc's horse Porte Maillot appeared to be the certain winner when Jockey Hobbs pulled up within a few yards of the winning point, having mistaken a pole for the winning post. Then August Belmont's filly Quelle est Belle II. dashed past and won by a head.

This finish threw somewhat into the shade the fine race run by W. K. Vanderbilt's Sightly, which was a good third. The excellent performance of the two American horses was loudly cheered.

Contrary to the usual custom of wearing tailor-made gowns to Chantilly, a large number of fine and costly creations were seen to-day in the paddock. The chief novelty was the accentuation of the shortness of the skirt in front, which shows the feet as far as the ankles. Although, owing to the distance from Chantilly, the race course is not usually chosen for the launching of new fashions, there were many striking novelties in the trimming of the hats seen to-day for the first time this season.

The shapes remain much the same, as small as ever, and scarcely adorned with anything else but osprey. The trimming, however, instead of being worn standing straight, is now worn leaning backward, almost hanging on the shoulders. This novel way is, according to the experts, to give tone to the fashion for the rest of the season.

Although the weather was far from ideal, a good many well-known Americans motored out early in the day and lunched at the Grand Condé before going to the course. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. E. Berry Wall, Mr. and Mrs. Charles, Mr. and Mrs. Wilkie, Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Dallas B. Pratt, Mrs. Stanford Menken, and Mrs. John A. Ryan. Others seen in the paddock were Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Wood, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Swift, Mr. and Mrs. Bertram J. Horton, George Miller, who just returned from a long auto trip through the Near East; J. A. Leathand Smith, George Tyler, Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Harding, Mr. and Mrs. Dunning Jarvis, Mrs. Branton, Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Bryant, and Curtis Maffat.

After the races Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Stotesbury entertained at dinner. The table was very charmingly decorated with flowers, concealing tiny electric lights. John James also had a large party. Mrs. B. B. Kirkland sat at the head of the large and beautifully decorated table.

Mrs. J. Gebhardt and her daughter also entertained a few friends, Mrs. F. Wilse being of the party. Mr. and Mrs. Lucien B. Chase dined alone, as did Mr. and Mrs. G. Blumenthal. Other well-known Americans who entertained at dinner were F. Thompson, who had six guests, and Le Grand Barton. Mrs. J. Henry Smith dined quietly with a couple of guests. Anthony Drexel, who has just arrived from London, and Mr. and Mrs. T. H. King were others who dined in the garden of the Ritz.

PARIS, June 9.—August Belmont's Quelle Est Belle II. to-day won the Prix de Diane—the French Oaks—from a field of twenty horses at the Chantilly course. Edmond Blanc's Porte Maillot was second, and W. K. Vanderbilt's Sightly third.

The French Oaks, which is a ten and a half furlong event for three-year-old fillies, was valued this year at $17,400. In spite of the showery weather a great crowd of fashionable and sporting people assembled at the beautiful course, a strong American contingent, which loudly cheered Mr. Belmont's horse, being present. Quelle Est Belle II. ruled favorite at 7 to 2; Porte Maillot was at 41 to 10, and Sightly at 40 to 1.

The race proved one of the most interesting in recent years. Porte Maillot and Quelle Est Belle shot out in front soon after the start and rapidly outdistanced the field. Entering the straight they raced neck and neck, but Maillot's jockey mistook the last post but one for the winning post and dropped his hands. The Belmont filly forged in front and won by a short head.

HOMAGE TO SUBMARINE DEAD.

Delcasse Speaks at Scene of Vendemiaire Wreck to Boom of Guns.

CHERBOURG, June 9.—As a further investigation only confirmed the impossibility of recovering the bodies of the crew of the submarine Vendemiaire, which was sunk off the Cherbourg Peninsula yesterday, the Minister of Marine, M. Delcasse, went out to the scene of the disaster aboard the armored cruiser Gloire to-day to pay homage to the dead. The warship steamed up slowly to the spot where the submarine disappeared, the engines were stopped, and the Minister of Marine, standing on the bridge, surrounded by Admirals, bared his head and made a brief address. The marine guard presented arms, the band played the Marseillaise, and the guns boomed a salute. The crews of the Gloire and the two other warships, which were moored to mark the spot, were drawn up in lines on the decks.

The exact cause of the disaster can never be known. The second officer in command of the battleship Saint Louis, who was on the bridge at the time of the collision, declares that the Vendemiaire's periscope shot up so close to the battleship that there was no time either to reverse the engines or put over the helm. He distinctly saw the ram cut the submarine in two, and did not doubt that all on board perished instantly.

A diver who examined the bow of the Saint Louis reports that beyond a certain amount of paint scraped off the port side, no damage whatever was done to the battleship.

DEAL IN ARTIFICIAL COTTON.

Paris Suit Follows Inventor's Failure to Make It in Milan.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, June 9.—A case before the Paris courts recalls that M. Lemoine, the alleged inventor of artificial diamonds, and a Belgian engineer living in Paris, named Alfred Bloch, bought from two inventors named Boulbon and Cassier patents for the manufacture of artificial cotton.

M. Bloch sold the patents to Signor Crespi, an Italian manufacturer in Milan, who paid £2,000 down and promised to pay Bloch £16,000 when the experiments were carried out in Crespi's factory under the direction of Boulbon. Last April Crespi informed Bloch that the experiments were quite successful.

Delighted with the result, Crespi approached a Manchester firm with the object of selling them the patents, and the latter decided that they would buy them for £400,000.

More experiments were made about this time without success. Again, about the middle of May another attempt was made. This time some very fine cotton was produced, but five days later came a coup de theatre.

Crespi introduced policemen in the factory disguised as workmen. There was no doubt that Boulbon, in order to be sure of finding cotton afterward in the condensing tubes, placed some there beforehand. To this Boulbon confessed. Then Bloch, under somewhat mysterious circumstances, returned the £2,000 to Crespi, and in addition £1,200, which was later claimed for expenses.

Bloch immediately came to Paris, where he commenced proceedings against Boulbon. Yesterday Boulbon was cross-examined and admitted that he had "cooked" the experiments, but only in order to forestall possible miscalculations. He continued to insist on the efficacy of his process, and asked that three specialists should examine it. The Judge agreed.

FAIR INTERESTS SPAIN.

Minister So Tells Panama Commission—Royal Reception To-day.

MADRID, June 9.—The special commission of the Panama-Pacific Exposition arrived here to-day from Lisbon. The members of the commission were cordially received at noon by the Minister of Foreign Affairs, M. Prieto, who assured them of Spain's great interest in the exposition. The Minister said, however, that he was unable for the present to make any statement as to the extent of Spain's participation.

The Commissioners will be received in audience to-morrow by the King, and will attend a luncheon at the Foreign Office in their honor.

SEE DOCK STRIKE ENDING.

Men's Leaders Expect Employers to Accept Government Proposals.

LONDON, June 9.—There is a general belief that the middle of the week will see the resumption of work by the dock strikers, 20,000 of whom held a demonstration at Tower Hill to-day. The leaders in their speeches declared it was their opinion that the employers at to-morrow's conference would acquiesce in the Government proposals. In the event of their failing, however, a national strike would inevitably be called.

It is understood that should the employers still refuse to yield the Government will forthwith introduce a bill in Parliament looking to the establishment of a joint board of arbitration.

BERLIN-VIENNA AIR RACE.

Three Aviators Make Headway, Five Meet Mishaps, One Badly Hurt.

BERLIN, June 9.—An aeroplane contest from Berlin to Vienna, under the auspices of the Imperial Aviation Society and the Austrian Aero Club, began this morning. Eleven aviators, each with a military passenger, were engaged, of whom eight started.

The Austrian, Csakay, reached Breslau, a distance by rail of 200 miles, in 2 hours and 58 minutes. Hirth (German) and Bergmann (Austrian) also arrived at Breslau.

Lieut. Bier and Steffin, Germans, made a forced landing at Beeskow, in Brandenburg, wrecking their machine. Steffin was badly injured, and is suffering from concussion of the brain and a fractured leg.

Stanger (Austrian) landed in a storm near Hirschberg. His machine was wrecked, and he was compelled to give up the contest. Wienzciers also wrecked his machine shortly after the start and retired. Baron Thusna met with an accident and withdrew.

The aviators who reached Breslau postponed their further flight on account of stormy weather.

ANGLO-FRENCH FLEET FOR MEDITERRANEAN

New Co-operative Defense Scheme Decided Upon by Malta Conference.

NO ALLIANCE WITH FRANCE

Only a Share of Responsibility with Her in Levant Against Germany, Is Britain's Plan.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, June 9.—Premier Asquith and Winston Churchill returned to London to-day after their momentous conference at Malta over the Mediterranean problem with Lord Kitchener, the British representative in Egypt; Sir Ian Hamilton, Military Commander in Chief in the Mediterranean, and Admiral Sir E. Poe, Naval Commander in Chief.

They decided that owing to the necessity of concentrating Britain's naval strength in the North Sea, her naval and military policy in the Mediterranean must be changed and the position in these waters strengthened.

The plan proposed is still to be considered by the Imperial Defense Committee, but The Daily Mail has reason to believe that the new scheme is as follows:

The weak squadron of four old armored cruisers, which at present does duty for the British Navy in the Mediterranean, is to be strengthened by battleships of modern type.

Some arrangement will be made with France to share with Great Britain the responsibility for the defense of British interests in the Mediterranean.

"The exact nature of the limits of this division of responsibility," says The Daily Mail, "is still to be made known, but they do not, we believe, involve any radical change in the entente between the two countries. No formal alliance is contemplated.

"Whatever may be its character, it is obvious that any scheme based upon divided responsibility for the defense of the most important link in our imperial defenses will provoke much criticism. In the opinion of many authorities, both naval and military, it would be wiser to create a special fleet for the Mediterranean by making use of the budget surplus of £6,500,000.

"This, however, does not appear to commend itself to the Government, though it is certain that a part of the surplus must be used for new construction.

"The urgency of a change of policy is forced upon the British Government by two facts—the Italian war in Tripoli and the growing strength of the Austrian and Italian fleets, which are at the disposal of Germany under the Triple Alliance.

"The action of Italy in seizing islands in the Aegean and in the Mediterranean has created a new situation. Italy has occupied the islands with the avowed purpose of putting pressure upon Turkey in order to bring an end to the ineffectual struggle in Tripoli.

"The Italian Government may have no present intention of keeping any of these islands, but when the time comes for evacuating them popular opinion in Italy may make it difficult for them to withdraw.

WIDENER TO BUILD LIBRARY.

Will Erect Wing at Harvard for Books of Grandson, Titanic Victim.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., June 9.—Philadelphia bibliophiles are interested in the announcement that it is the intention of P. A. B. Widener to build a wing to Harvard University library in which to house the almost priceless book treasures of his grandson, Harry E. Widener, who lost his life when the Titanic went down.

Young Widener's collection is remarkable in view of its owner's age and represents in addition to a keen appreciation of books and their value an ability of selection worthy of a reader of great experience. The disposition of the library became known when Harry Widener's will was admitted to probate, together with that of his father, George D. Widener.

His grandfather has decided that, while Harvard's possession of the library will be a great tribute to his grandson, the separation of the volumes in quarters removed from the main library is more worthy their value as a collection. Plans for the new building have not been completed, but it is expected that the project will be carried out on a scale commensurate with other of Mr. Widener's charities.

PRINCE ON POLITICAL TRIP.

Ex-Premier of Japan Causes Diplomatic Flurry by Secret Errand.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, June 9.—Mrs. Clark, an active, cheerful little woman, one of London's oldest inhabitants, celebrated her 107th birthday yesterday.

She began the festivities with a substantial breakfast of bacon and eggs, which she followed with a dinner of ham, veal, potatoes, cabbage, gooseberry tart, Devonshire cream, birthday cake, and tea.

The wonderful old lady scorns invalid's foods, and insists upon having the same fare as the others in her household. Part of the birthday celebration included dancing, and Mrs. Clark footed it blithely with her son.

CUT OFF NEW YORK'S WATER.

National Guard Defenders Hypothetically Dead After a Sham Battle.

There was a good deal of blankety-blank warfare yesterday covering ground made famous by Washington's struggle with the British near White Plains, and as a result New York and vicinity was hypothetically without a drop of water all last night. The water had been cut off by a hypothetical invading army from Boston, which had captured the water supply after declaring war upon New York York.

The defenders of New York's water supply, supposed for the purposes of the mimic battle to be contained in a single reservoir, consisted of 300 soldiers of the National Guard. They were put to flight as they were outflanked on the right. When their line was shifted to meet this attack, they were mowed down by another line of the enemy firing directly into their rear.

It was a day of hypothetical carnage, in which Boston's warriors all but annihilated those representing New York. The invaders captured the defending artillery, cut down cavalry outposts, and destroyed field telephone lines. The sham fight was arranged to give field practice to the Seventy-first Regiment of infantry, a detachment of field artillery, and a single company, the newest in the service, from the Seventh Regiment of Infantry. All the organizations belonged to the National Guard.

The new company from the Seventh Regiment was Company M, and it had its first experience in the field yesterday. The lesson of the battle was that raw troops cannot be depended on when pitted against seasoned soldiers.

Chileans Drown in Santiago Flood.

TURKISH POSITIONS TAKEN.

Italians Capture Them by Bayonet Charge, Routing Sultan's Forces.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—The high Turkish positions of Abdel Gilli, between the oasis of Zanzir and the Mediterranean, are now occupied by Italian troops, as the result of an offensive action begun yesterday, under orders of Gen. Camarna, according to a cablegram received to-day at the Italian Embassy here from Tripoli.

It is stated that the Italians gained the Turkish positions after a bayonet charge and subsequently repelled a counter-attack of the Turkish-Arab forces, dislodging them from the Oriental front of the oasis and putting them to flight.

HAMMERSTEIN'S NEW PLANS.

American Impresario Likely to Join Him in English Opera Productions.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, June 9.—Oscar Hammerstein has had three offers in reference to the future of his London Opera House. One, which may be accepted, is from a well-known American impresario, whose name is withheld.

In fact an agreement has been drawn up, and it awaits only the necessary signatures. It provides for the production of opera in English with English-speaking artists.

In this particular the plan is in entire accord with the views of Mr. Hammerstein, who agrees that in the performance of operas in English lies the salvation of an institution like the London Opera House. The negotiations are still proceeding.

Nicaraguan Plot Bared.

SAN JUAN DEL SUR, Nicaragua, June 9.—A plot has been discovered in Managua to deliver the forts at that place to the enemies of Gen. Luis Mena, the present War Minister, who last October was decreed by Congress to be the President of the republic for the term of 1913-16.

HIBBEN BIDS SENIORS AID THE ONE CAUSE

Lawyers and Doctors Must Assume Responsibilities of Missionaries and Preachers.

THE BACCALAUREATE SERMON

New President of Princeton First Presbyterian Minister to Preach There Since 1902.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., June 9.—Princeton's ceremonies in celebration of the one hundred and sixty-sixth commencement were opened this morning with the baccalaureate sermon, which was delivered in Alexander Hall by President John Grier Hibben. Though recently assuming the Presidency of Princeton University, this is not Dr. Hibben's first time to officiate at the commencement exercises. In 1906, when Woodrow Wilson, then President of Princeton, was abroad, Dr. Hibben was the choice of the Trustees to preside and confer the degrees.

President Hibben emphasized the importance of the spiritual side of life to the class of 1912 this morning, insisting that the college man should be well equipped to realize the needs of other men and serve them where they were deficient. His text was, "Render therefore unto Caesar the things which be Caesar's, and unto God the things which be God's." (Luke, xx., 25.) Many Princetonians recalled the fact this morning that it was the first time since 1902 that the President delivering the baccalaureate sermon was a Presbyterian minister, President Hibben having preached for four years in Pennsylvania.

President Hibben said in part:

"We sustain certain relations as citizens of the State and also as citizens of the Kingdom of God. Both in relation to Caesar and in relation to God we do not of our free will decide to volunteer our services in a cause by which act we thereby become invested with consequent duties. We are born into the offices of citizenship. Our very birthright is an inheritance of responsibility, and we win freedom only through a spirit of reverence for the reign of law. It is often thought that men who become ministers, or missionaries, or workers in social settlements, or who are engaged in some particular form of Christian work, have thereby chosen a peculiarly religious life, and therefore necessarily are called upon to assume responsibilities of the definitely religious nature. But the same, however, is equally true of the doctor, the lawyer, or the man of business. Every one is called to consecrate his life to the great cause. There are many pursuits in life, but only one cause—and that is to realize in ourselves and to help others to realize the divine nature in man, and thus to prove the dignity and the power of human life in the higher ranges of its possibilities. We may worship and bow down before a god with feet of clay and fall utterly to find the God in whom we live and have our being.

"To the Members of the Senior Class: You are going forth from this place, which has been your home and which you have learned to love with passionate devotion, into a new world, which lies before you. It will be well to pause a while upon the frontier before you cross its boundaries in order to ask yourselves, with searching honesty, whose world it is and to what sovereign power you owe allegiance. Do not be complacent in the security of a narrow-minded prejudice, which places exclusive stress upon the material values, and thereby starves the soul. This is not a world in which you are merely to seek fortune, pursue pleasure, or endeavor to achieve name and fame. There are two factors which combine to determine your responsibility—the world's need on the one hand and your ability to meet it on the other. One of the most significant results of your education is to give you a more vivid and real sense of the need and at the same time to increase your powers of ministering to it. Whether your life is a success or failure will be determined solely by the set of responsibilities which you recognize as supreme and which you heartily endeavor to discharge. Circumstances will not make you, nor will they unmake you, but solely the burden of obligation which you are brave enough to shoulder.

"As you enter the world, with its bewildering confusion of clashing interests, its lights and darkness, good and evil, its strife and discord, its hopes and fears, its stubborn questionings, its mystery, its doubts, its brute facts, and its deeper and triumphant tones of prophetic promise—as you face it all, impatient to become a part of it all, I beseech you in this quiet hour pray that you may acquit yourselves like men. Give your strength to the world's weakness, your faith to its doubt, your hope to its despair. Our prayers, our continued interest, our confident expectations follow you."

HARVARD CLUBS COMING.

The National Meeting Begins Here on Friday.

A two days' meeting of the greatest number of Harvard men that has ever gathered in the city is being planned for next Friday and Saturday, the occasion being the sixteenth annual meeting of the associated Harvard Clubs of the whole country. The meeting will precede commencement activities, which begin next Sunday, and every Harvard man in the country has been asked to go to Cambridge by way of New York and be the guest of the local Harvard Club for these two days.

Accommodations in every hotel near Times Square have been reserved, as well as nine floors of the Hotel Vanderbilt, and over 2,000 men, according to John W. Prentiss of the Committee on Arrangements, have already accepted the invitation of the Harvard Club.

The first day of the meeting will be devoted to the business of the association, followed in the evening with a dinner at the Hotel Astor. Peter B. Olney, President of the Harvard Club of New York, will welcome the visitors, and Joseph H. Choate will be the toastmaster. The guests will include President Lowell, the Rev. Minot Osgood Simons of Cleveland, President of the Associated Harvard Clubs; Dr. Edward H. Bradford of Boston, newly elected Dean of the Harvard Medical School; Secretary of the Navy George von L. Meyer, and Abbot Low Mills, a Harvard overseer from Portland, Ore. Col. Roosevelt has also accepted an invitation to speak, but will be excused by the association in case he has business in Chicago.

On Saturday morning a trip will be made in the new steamer Trojan to West Point, where the cadets will parade in honor of the Harvard delegation, followed by a baseball game between the West Point team and a picked team of Harvard alumni, led by Coach Percy Haughton. Following that, some of the Harvard men will play a game of polo with the West Pointers. The return to the city will be made late in the afternoon, and on Saturday evening there will be another large private dinner at the Astor.

The diners will be seated by classes and formal speechmaking will give way to a vaudeville show and plenty of singing, led by the Harvard Glee Club, which is coming to New York for the occasion. On Sunday there will be an overflow seashore party for those who do not desire to go to Cambridge. The Harvard Club, on West Forty-fourth Street, will be the headquarters for the Harvard men, and the club will bear all the expenses of entertainment.

Monday, June 17, is Phi Beta Kappa Day at Harvard, and the following day is Class Day. The first Harvard-Yale baseball game will be played in New Haven on the same day, and 1,000 seats have been reserved for members of the Associated Harvard Clubs. On Wednesday the second game of the series of three games will be played in Cambridge, and that gala event will bring every Harvard man to the class reunions at his Alma Mater. Commencement is on Thursday, June 20, and the Harvard-Yale boat races at New London on Friday. In case of a tie in the baseball series the third game will be played, as usual, in this city, and this will end the commencement festivities for the year.

Among those who have accepted invitations to be the guests of the local Harvard Club are ex-Ambassador Robert Bacon, Fellow of Harvard College; Postmaster General Frank H. Hitchcock, Henry Lee Higginson of Boston, W. Cameron Forbes, Governor General of the Philippine Islands; Judge Francis J. Swayze of New Jersey, Regis H. Post, ex-Governor of Porto Rico; ex-Gov. Augustus E. Willson of Kentucky, Owen Wister, ex-Lieut. Gov. Louis Adams Frothingham of Massachusetts, J. Pierpont Morgan, Jr., Thomas W. Lamont, Austen G. Fox, Charles S. Fairchild, August Belmont, Frederick A. Delano of Chicago, and Howard Eliot, President of the Northern Pacific Railroad, of St. Paul.

FINDS AUNT AFTER 40 YEARS.

Man Recognizes Her, Though She Is 108 Years Old.

There was rejoicing yesterday in the home of the Daughters of Jacob, 302 East Broadway, when, after a separation of forty years, Moses Lazarowitz, 80 years old, met his aunt, and, more than that, it was the old man who recognized his aunt, though she is now 108 years old and a far different woman than when, in her 68th year, she sailed from Poland with her husband to begin life in this country.

Mrs. Ethel Plonskey has been in the home several years. Nearly all of the time she has been in America was spent in this city, where she and her husband kept a little dry goods and notion store in the lower east side. When she came from Warsaw Moses Lazarowitz, the son of her father's brother, was her favorite of the Lazarowitz children. Moses was then 40 years old, and it was he who accompanied her to the railroad station when she began her trip. Even then her nephew was looking forward to coming to America with his wife.

Ten years are a long time, and when they had passed and Moses was ready to leave Warsaw he had lost sight of his aunt. The family knew from the letters she had written home that she had prospered in a measure. Then there were no more letters. He and his wife landed in New York about 30 years ago and the nephew started in business. His wife died and he married again. Several months ago his second wife died, and Lazarowitz, who then lived in East 104th Street, was admitted to the home a few days ago.

On Saturday the 185 old men and women were passing into the synagogue in the building when Moses spied ahead of him an old woman who looked familiar. He hastened forward and when he got a good look at the woman asked: "Are you Ettel Plonsky?"

She said she was, and then Moses told her he was her nephew.

The aged couple received the congratulations of the others in the home, and there was a special dinner for Moses and his new-found aunt.

WOMEN AGAIN INVADE QUEENS

More Towns to Hear from Suffragette Speakers.

The Women's Suffrage Party, having made one "whirlwind" campaign of Queens, has decided that the ten speeches delivered from an automobile were so profitable as to justify another trip of the same sort through the borough.

The second campaign will begin this morning at 10 o'clock, and will last until 7:30 in the evening. hTe towns to be visited include Jamaica, Woodhaven, Ridgewood, Elmhurst, Corona, Long Island City, and Richmond Hill. The principal speakers will be Miss Elizabeth Freeman and Mrs. J. Lees Laidlaw. The arrangements for the meetings will be in charge of Mrs. Alfred J. Eno, head of the suffrage party in Queens.

William A. Day Ends 13,000-Mile Trip Enthusiastic Over Business Conditions.

POLITICS ARE DISCOUNTED

Not Taken Seriously, He Says, as Compared with the Widespread Interest in Industrial Progress.

William A. Day, President of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, who has just returned from a trip which covered all parts of the United States except New England, spoke in glowing terms yesterday of the fundamental prosperity of the country and the progressive spirit that he found in all sections.

Judge Day, as head of the Equitable, is responsible for the investment of some $400,000,000, and the purpose of his trip was to study business and investment conditions. He traveled 13,000 miles in the seven weeks that he was away, and visited thirty-six cities.

"I met merchants, bankers, railroad men, agriculturists, and the representatives of various important branches of business," he said, "and I can sum up the result of my observations and study as to the business outlook in two words, 'Most excellent.' I found business conditions and the field for investment most promising in virtually every State.

"Many distinctly hopeful elements sustain this view. The prospect for good crops of all kinds was never better, the gross railroad earnings show steady gain, greater activity is evidenced in nearly all lines, particularly in the leading trade centres; our foreign as well as our local commerce is expanding, our mineral production shows satisfactory development, we have had a substantial gain in building activity, money is available at reasonable rates, and the wealth producers of our country are hard at work; capital shows unmistakable signs of increasing confidence.

"However the public may be concerned in the discussion of political and social problems, they are still more absorbed in commerce. Agitation upon such subjects may cause temporary slackness in certain lines of trade or in many lines of trade for short periods of time, but the sun comes up every day just the same, the rain falls, and the crops grow. This fundamental basis of our prosperity never gave greater promise than it does now. There may be sags in the upward curve of our prosperity, but the trend is always upward.

Firm Confidence Everywhere.

"Our people have outgrown the habit of permitting political or speculative excitement seriously to unsettle business. While I encountered a great variety of opinions as to remedies for present-day problems, I was very strongly impressed by the firm confidence and sober, optimistic business spirit of our people everywhere. Notwithstanding the indiscriminate criticism of corporate organizations, the business integrity of this country was never at a higher level than it is right now, and the average man, I believe, appreciates it; in fact, he is more thoughtful than he gets credit for being.

"I am especially interested in our agricultural development. The foundation of our progress and prosperity is so firmly planted in the soil that man scarcely has the power to disturb it.

"The abnormally large cotton crop of 1911 has done wonders for the South. It started up the languishing cotton mills and poured ready money into the great arteries as well as into the smaller veins of trade in that section. The short cotton crops of recent years caused such high prices for that commodity that the mills had to close down in whole or in part. The planters at first regarded the bumper crops in the nature of a calamity because of the break in price to which they were conducive. But they now perceive that it was the one thing needed to start up their mills again and to bring to their doors the money which they so much required. The crop of 1911 was a benefaction to the United States and to the whole world.

"The farms of the South are increasing in number, and their methods of agriculture are constantly improving. The floods in the Mississippi Valley are not a wholly unmixed calamity to the agricultural interests, as the waters have deposited rich mud on the fields, which will fertilize them far more than artificial fertilizer could.

Inspected Irrigation Plants.

"I stopped at many points in the so-called arid regions of Arizona, Utah, Idaho, and Washington and was afforded an opportunity to inspect irrigation plants in the country tributary to them, especially in the valleys of the Salt, the Bear, the Boise, and the Snake River. Those great stretches of territory—some of them widely separated—when last I saw them were arid desert plains, apparently incapable of sustaining man or beast. Today, owing in part to the assistance of the Federal Government and in part to private enterprise, thousands of acres of fertile fields, producing fruits and nuts which were at one time supposed to be confined to semi-tropical countries, are now to be found, as well as ordinary crops of all kinds incident to temperate zones.

"The irrigation of these arid sections is producing an abundance of wealth and thousands of happy homes. These prosperous reclaimed sections were, of course, also found in New Mexico, Arizona, California, and Colorado.

"In the West and Northwest the prospect for an excellent crop of cereals is most gratifying. The Spring was somewhat late, but the farmers said the soil never turned over in better condition, and they are generally enthusiastic in regard to crop prospects. Oregon and Washington promise record crops of fruit this season. Merchants engaged in both small and large enterprises seem to be satisfied regarding the past and most hopeful for the future.

"I crossed the Provinces of Saskatchewan, Alberta, and Manitoba in Canada, and was amazed at the changes which had been wrought there in the last eight years. For hundreds of miles we passed through wheat fields, which, as far as they eye could reach, appeared to be of uniform excellence and condition. I talked at Calgary and Winnipeg with grain raisers, grain buyers, and millers, and they predict the greatest yield of wheat in the history of Western Caanda. With respect to wheat conditions, a similar feeling of optimism prevails in Minnesota and the Dakotas.

"Notwithstanding the fact that this great productive area of the West is provided with a number of transcontinental lines for the transportation of its products, the further development of its agriculture (to say nothing of its mineral deposits) will require more railroads as well as increased facilities of the present railroads.

Praises Railroads' Punctuality.

"Speaking of railroads, I have had a most remarkable experience upon this trip. I left New York on April 20 and traveled for seven weeks. I traveled upon a carefully prepared itinerary, and on a journey covering more than 13,000 miles I was not delayed five minutes on any train with the exception of one instance in Arkansas, due to the flood. Every other train during the entire trip was on schedule time, and I reached New York on the minute scheduled when I left nearly two months ago. This surely is a splendid tribute to the efficiency with which American railroads are now being conducted.

"The growth in population and commerce of our cities, large and small, is truly extraordinary. The extent and activity of the commerce of Los Angeles, Salt Lake City, Boise, Portland, and Seattle would prove a revelation to the average Easterner. A feature which no traveler can fail to observe is the remarkable development of the interior Western cities, as well as those on the Coast.

"San Francisco is not merely a solid and substantial city, but one of superbly modern construction and a splendid example of American energy and enterprise. It is marvelous to see what has been accomplished by the people of San Francisco since the great calamity befell them.

"Californians realize that the completion of the Panama Canal will be the engineering triumph of the ages, and will effect the most remarkable changes in the world's routes of trade and create new trackless highways of commerce. Judging from the plans shown to me, the Panama-Pacific Exposition will be worthy of the great achievement which it is to celebrate, and of the spirit of America.

"I have returned from my long inspection trip proud that I am an American and a citizen of the great family of States comprising a union so extensive in resources and aggressive in spirit."

WILL USE CAMERAS IN WAITERS' STRIKE

Union Pickets Plan to Photograph and Then Ostracize Men Who Return to Work.

TO HAMPER FLEET DINNERS

German Strikers Sent to Hoboken to Urge Stewards on German Liners Not to Aid Hotel Proprietors.

Striking waiters who will do picket duty to-day near the hotels and restaurants in which they were formerly employed will carry concealed under their coats small cameras. Whenever they see a former member of the union who has forsaken the strike they will snap the shutter of the camera and take with them to their headquarters a picture of the man who has deserted their cause. The men so photographed, it was said yesterday, would be forever ostracized by members of the Waiters' Union.

This novel plan to save the strike from failure was decided on by the waiters at a mass meeting yesterday. The union men admitted that many of their number had accepted the offers of their former managers and had returned to work.

On a large blackboard in the assembly hall there was a notice in German requesting all German waiters to go immediately to Hoboken and mingle with the stewards of the North German Lloyd and Hamburg-American Lines. They were asked to tell the stewards of the strike and ask them not to allow any of their waiters to work for the hotel managers here. The importation of non-union waiters is feared, because of the series of big dinners which will be given at the Waldorf-Astoria and the Hotel Astor in honor of the visiting German fleet, and the strikers intend to combat the efforts of the managers to hire German waiters, who would consider it an honor to serve the German visitors. One hotel manager, the striking waiters declared yesterday, had brought a consignment of strike-breakers into his hotel through a spur of the Subway connecting with the hotel, thus eluding the pickets who were stationed about the hotel. Pickets were ordered to stand near the Waldorf, Astor, Holland House, Louis Martin's, the Knickerbocker, Plaza, and Rector's last night, to prevent more strikebreakers from taking service in these places.

An unsuccessful effort was made last night to break up the dinner given the visiting German naval officers at the clubhouse of the Deutscher Verein at 112 Central Park South. A representative of the Waiters' Union managed to get work as an extra waiter for last night's dinner, his object being to try and persuade the regular club waiters to walk out soon after the dinner began.

The man made overtures to the waiters, but they were rejected. One of the waiters he approached informed the manager of the club, and a policeman was sent for to arrest the troublemaker. Realizing that he was about to be arrested, the strike agitator ran out of the clubhouse and escaped.

One by one the hotels and restaurants which have been inconvenienced by the strike are reopening with a full force of waiters, chefs, and cooks. Whenever it has been possible to do so the managers have taken back as many of their old employes as possible, without recognition of the union. Mouquin's uptown restaurant at Sixth Avenue and Twenty-eighth Street, which has had its doors closed since May 31, when seventy-five waiters and cooks walked out in a body, will open at 7 o'clock this morning with a full equipment.

There was a time when to own a piano was considered a luxury if not an extravagance confined to the few.

While this was partly due to the high cost, we believe it was more due to the treatment of the piano as an extravagant piece of fashionable furniture necessary to make the parlor complete. Music itself was secondary.

But to-day the piano is in the home because of the love of music and of its great educational advantages.

This love of music has grown so rapidly in late years that the earnest demand for pianos has made it possible to build better instruments than were ever built and at prices to meet the income of any family.

SPIRIT SURPRISES PROF. J. H. HYSLOP

He Was Trying to Reach Prof. James When Carroll D. Wright Interrupted.

KEPT HIM GUESSING A WHILE

Finally Said, "Well, C. D. W. Is Here," and Told of a Vine-Covered School He Had Seen in the Flesh.

In the course of exhaustive experiments carried on since the death of Prof. William James of Harvard University, for the purpose of trying to establish personal identity in the spirit world, Dr. James H. Hyslop, head of the American Society for Psychical Research, and others have received many interesting communications purporting to come from the late Carroll D. Wright, the statistician, who was United States Commissioner of Labor at Washington from 1885 to 1905.

Dr. Wright, who, in addition to many other activities, was President of Clark College, a part of Clark University, died in Worcester, Mass., on Feb. 20, 1909. He was also head of the Boston Bureau of Statistics for a considerable period before taking up his duties in Washington. Although he was a man of international reputation as a statistician, and despite the fact that he was engaged in many enterprises of importance to the public as a whole, Dr. Hyslop points out that some of his activities were practically unknown outside the circles immediately affected by them. Dr. Hyslop makes this explanation to establish the point that the medium through whom the alleged communications were transmitted could not and, as a matter of fact, did not know much about Dr. Wright.

The real name of this medium is withheld. She is spoken of as Mrs. Chenoweth. Dr. Hyslop had sittings with her. Then he sent Dr. Wright's daughter for private sittings. Her identity was unknown to Mrs. Chenoweth, and she gave no clue by which it could be learned that she looked for communications from any particular spirit. Nevertheless, incidents and scenes relating to Carroll D. Wright were revealed which proved to be the more astonishing inasmuch as verification was very difficult, or nearly impossible, even by his closest friends and members of his family.

Calls Wright a Spiritual Nemesis.

A summary of the experiments relating to Dr. Wright has been prepared by Dr. Hyslop, and will appear in the June issue of the Journal of the American Society for Psychical Research. The following remarks and incidents are taken from advance proofs. Dr. Hyslop never knew Dr. Wright personally. Peculiarities concerning long-deceased relatives of Dr. Wright and unknown to the immediate members of his family, by whom they were verified only after the most minute inquiry, were described with remarkable accuracy by the medium. They could not have been known by Mrs. Chenoweth, Dr. Hyslop emphatically declares. Some of these incidents are believed by the investigator to be evidences of supernormal phenomena.

"He [Dr. Wright] was intimately associated with President G. Stanley Hall," says Dr. Hyslop, "in connection with the undergraduate department of Clark University, and hence was the President of Clark College. I had had occasion to review at much length a book for which President Hall stood sponsor, and in no uncertain terms did I speak of its contents. It was something of a Nemesis to have his old colleague turn up soon afterward and undertake to prove his identity through a medium."

Dr. Hyslop then gives part of the record of a sitting after the name Carroll had been obtained. The spirit of Prof. James had been purporting to communicate. This was on Oct. 22, 1910. The words in parentheses are the remarks and questions of the investigator. Here is what was received:

Carroll went first before James did, you know. He did not get back to James. James has gone to him, all right. This is what Dr. James says. They had long been friends. He had to tell him how he appreciated him. Sometimes things get twisted around. They worked together.

(What did he work on?) Carroll? (Yes.)

Figures all the time. Dr. James was theoretical; one was on the earth and the other in the sky. Figures, figures, figures, mathematics whatever it is. His mathematics was his power. Besides this, he looked at the good and welfare of the people. He could talk on the tariff if he were here. Do you know it?

Well, he could. I don't know that he would. I see two Cs and two Ws connected with Carroll. Do you know what I mean?

Two Wrights Confused.

And here is Dr. Hyslop's explanation of the errors and confusion:

"When I got the name Wright at the earlier sitting I inquired whether Prof. James had known Carroll D. Wright or any one by the name of Wright and ascertained in reply that he had not known Carroll D. Wright, but had known another Wright who had been a colleague of his in Harvard University. I was thus prepared to understand what the tacit confession of confusion was here. Carroll D. Wright was a master of labor statistics and perhaps statistics generally, so that the allusion here to 'figures' was very pertinent and inquiry showed that Mrs. Chenoweth knew nothing about the fact.

"But the claim of friendship between him and Prof. James was false. Prof. James seems not even to have met him. Apparently the error and confusion was noticed by the control or communicator, as indicated in the reference to two C's and two W's. These pointed to Chauncey Wright who had died long ago and was known to Prof. James and to Carroll D. Wright who was not known to him, but who also died before him. This initial confusion of the two Wrights and their relation to Prof. James continued throughout the sittings, the subconscious of Mrs. Chenoweth always associating Carroll D. Wright with Prof. James as a friend.

"On Nov. 11, Prof. James, alluding to him again, I tried to get a clear indication of which Wright was meant and the answer that it was the one interested in economics identified Carroll D. Wright but not the one that could lay claim to his friendship and acquaintenance. Reference was also made to Washington that clearly indicated who was meant. Perhaps not less pertinent were the allusions to his interest in industrial problems and the completion of his last reports."

Here is another incident:

"On the next day he purported to communicate incidents in evidence of identity through G. P. as intermediary. The first thing given was as follows:

C. W. places his hands on the table and says that he thought all the physical phenomena were easily explained by magnetic influence or simple fraud, but he has reversed that opinion. The subtle influence of spirit was not plain to him except as a factor in life. The communication with the dead was unsatisfactory in most instances, but he was not a psychologist, and so did not comprehend what was being done.

"I learned from the family what I did not previously know that Mr. Wright had witnessed psychic phenomena in his early days, having seen table tipping, which is hinted at here by the reference to 'his hands on the table.' But he was not satisfied with the results, and gave up the subject as one in which conclusions could not be assured. He was not a psychologist. He was a religious believer and accepted the existence of spirit, but not communication with the dead. All this was unknown to Mrs. Chenoweth."

Dr. Hyslop then describes various sittings that Dr. Wright's married daughter had with Mrs. Chenoweth, in which the personalities of various deceased relatives of Dr. Wright were accurately described. Here is a sample of dialogue between sitter and medium, in which the medium is communicating what purports to be the attempt of some spirit to establish Dr. Wright's identity:

Now, do you know anything about a little thing that looks like a case? There are several little compartments in it. You know I see almost like wood and little compartments, and up in those compartments are things that I can take up. You know they are little grains of something like round, flat things that, if I dropped them, they would drop down like peas or things like that, like little pebbles, but they are in compartments, as though they are things that he had worked over, and had them to use for something. Do you know anything about this?

(Why, I don't seem to recall. You mean connected with his work?)

Yes, they look like grains, you know, as though they are all separate; they are larger than grains of sand, and they look something like little pills, you know.

(Yes.)

Did he ever study anything where he would have some of those little things in it? He was not a doctor himself was he?

(No.)

Well, do you know if he ever knew a doctor who had these little things?

(Yes, I think he was very fond of an uncle, and studied with him.)

Another of Wright's Peculiarities.

A little later, after some non-evidential talk about the same incidents, allusion was made to a "wooden box where they were in compartments before they were put into other smaller things, given out to the people."

"The very proximate character of this incident," says Dr. Hyslop, "is clear in the daughter's note, which says: 'He studied medicine with an uncle who was a physician, and later was in a drug store for a time. There he was also called doctor.'

"I think almost any one would recognize the description of a physician's case before it was admitted by the sitter, and the coincidence would not naturally be guessed in the life of Carroll D. Wright, which the admission of the sitter makes characteristic of his early life. It refers as much to the identity of the uncle as to his own, though not adequate in either case to determine that identity."

Dr. Hyslop quotes from the record one of the intimate and personal incidents which, he believes, go a long way toward establishing personal identity:

"The next incident is a characteristic of more than usual interest, as it is one that it would be difficult to ascertain in any normal way.

I see another little way. It goes along with his not liking the ceremonial and all that, but anything he dislikes is these. You know white things that go over beds, pillow shams? Well, those things bother him.

(That is very good, very true.)

I never heard any spirit say it before, but suddenly I see a bed. I see something like all fussed up; sometimes when he had to go away and sleep in other people's beds, and it would be as though I like my own bed. If I could be at home in my own bed, no nonsense about shams. The very name is distasteful to him and all this lace business. He is thoroughly a man. He likes comfortable things and pretty things and all that, but give me a bed with pillows.

"The daughter's note on this incident is as follows: 'He was impatient always of fuzzy things on beds and going about as much as he did, often spoke of lace spreads, &c., that bothered him.'"

There follows a long colloquy between sitter and medium concerning a building covered with vines, two tall stone posts at the gateway, a gravel drive, a detached building near at hand, and a visit to this scene in the Fall of the year. The medium says the man whose spirit is seeking to communicate returned from that place to his home and died. No one was able to identify the place, and at another sitting Dr. Hyslop appealed to Dr. Wright to communicate direct and endeavor to locate this scene. The answer came:

The Spirit Answers "Here."

"Well, C. D. W. is here."

Then, in more detail, a group of buildings with a "community of interests" was described. The view from their site included water and boats, shores dotted with houses and cottages, and a long wooden bridge with high girders. Subsequent investigation resulted in the following explanation by Dr. Hyslop:

"When the vine-clad house was mentioned in the automatic writing I had hoped that it would prove a good incident. But no member of the family recognized it as having any meaning at all. The daughter, however, casually remarked that her father had been on the board of the Hackley School at Tarrytown, N. Y. Inquiry immediately showed that it had vines over it, and I then ascertained that Mr. Wright had attended the board meeting of this school in the fall of 1909 a few months before his death, but did not attend the later meeting in January a few weeks before his death.

"The wooden bridge spoken of I could not find in my personal investigations, but the principal writes me that there was such a bridge near the building, but that it was recently removed. There are stone posts at the entrance to the grounds, but there are no vines near them or near the entrance. These are near and behind the chapel and are a very large collection of them, very noticeable to one driving in and up to the school. From points on or near the ground Haverstraw Bay, which is an enlargement of the Hudson River, can be seen, with the mountains beyond, making an extraordinarily fine view. Pleasure boats are numerous on the shores during the Summer season.

"After the long reference to the vine-clad building and indication that it was associated with the end of his life, he turned to some incidents associated with the funeral and, which are, of course, representative of posthumous, or what Mr. Myers called post-terrene, knowledge."

WE HOLD OROZCO'S EX-AID

Enrile, Fleeing Juarez, Held for Extradition for Fraud Under Diaz—His Rebel Captor Slain.

EL PASO, Texas, June 9.—Mexican Consul Lorente received word to-day that the rebel forces of Gen. Campa and Argumendo were routed at Nazas, fifty miles east of Torreon, by Gen. Blanquet and 1,500 federal cavalry, who are said to have the last remnant of the rebels surrounded. The confirmation of this report means the end of the rebel movement toward the rear of Huerta's columns, a harassing expedition that has been causing the Government commander no little worry.

Gen. Huerta was reported to have moved far north of Santa Rosalia to-day.

Gonzales C. Enrile, the deposed financial executive of the revolution, on fleeing to the United States from enemies in the rebel ranks who tried to kill him, was arrested early to-day by C. H. Webster, a Texas ranger, as Enrile crossed the international bridge from Juarez, and is now a prisoner of the United States authorities.

Enrile was once the right-hand man of Orozco, author of a caustic anti-American proclamation, and chief promoter of the present revolution. His arrest was ordered by the Mexican Government, which charges Enrile with embezzlement of funds while Consul under President Diaz at Clifton, Ariz., eighteen months ago. His extradition on this charge would place him at the mercy of the Mexican Government for his political acts.

Enrile handled the funds of the revolution for three months and admittedly made many enemies, finally being repudiated by Gen. Orozco. Weakened by two knife wounds and a bullet in his shoulder received in an encounter with two unknown assassins in the City of Chihuahua three weeks ago, Enrile doubted his physicians and sought medical treatment in the United States. He applied to Marion Letcher, the American Consul in Chihuahua, for safe conduct to the United States, but the latter declared the matter outside his jurisdiction.

After a telegram had been sent announcing his death early yesterday to foil his Juarez enemies, Enrile was placed secretly aboard a train in Chihuahua, arriving in Juarez last night. He would have escaped the rebel officials there, but for the watchfulness of Capt. Carlos Gonzales, chief immigration officer in Juarez. Gonzales arrested Enrile, taking him before Col. José Orozco, head of the garrison, who, knowing the safe conduct issued by his cousin, Gen. Pascual Orozco, the rebel chief, made preparations to execute Enrile. On bended knees the fugitive begged for life, beseeching Col. Pascual Orozco, Sr., father of the military leader, to get in telegraphic communication with his son in Chihuahua. The elder Orozco did so, and finally released Enrile. Early to-day Gonzales, who had blocked Enrile's escape, was found dead in a resort with a bullet through his brain.

The death of Gonzales, who was a classmate at Bucknell College of Christy Mathewson, the New York National League pitcher, is unexplained. The general impression is that friends of Enrile caused Gonzales's death, fearing that Gonzales might kill Enrile, despite instructions from rebel headquarters.

"You might as well get Gen. Orozco," said Enrile as Webster led him to jail. "I came only for medical treatment, but if the Mexican Government gets me the revolution has lost its personal friend and supporter."

Enrile talked of his own importance to the rebel cause and expressed the fear that the Madero Government would apprehend him by extradition. He will be held without bond for forty days, pending the arrival of extradition papers from Mexico, when he will have a hearing before a United States Commissioner.

GERARD'S MINE ATTACKED.

He Says Cinco Minas Property Was Well Guarded.

Justice James W. Gerard of the Supreme Court is one of the owners of the Cinco Minas property in the State of Jalisco, Mexico, which was attacked by bandits on Friday. He said yesterday that he felt confident the State authorities would succeed in capturing the men who fought with the guards of the American mine, wounding several of them. The Cinco Minas property is owned by the Marcus Daly estate and Justice Gerard. During the recent disturbances in the district the company has employed a guard of twenty Mexicans, fully armed, to protect its property. Recently the native Chief of Police at the camp was seized by bandits and murdered before the eyes of the American wife of the manager.

The district around the Cinco Minas property is very favorable for bandit operations, as Justice Gerard explained yesterday. The camp is situated about a hundred miles northwest of the large city of Guadalajara, and about fifteen miles from the line of the Southern Pacific road, which is now being constructed down the west coast of Mexico. With the exception of a gap of 125 miles in the rough Territory of Tepic, the road is completed from Guadalajara to the west coast. The country around is full of barrancas, or ravines, which furnish secure hiding places for marauders. At all times there is danger from the bands who ride down to a settlement, loot and kill, and then gallop back to their mountain retreats.

Near the Cinco Minas property is another large mine, El Favor, which is owned by McKeever Brothers of New York. The American manager of this mine was murdered not long ago by bandits. The Cabrera mine, which is very rich in silver and gold, and is owned by an American company, is nearby. The whole distrit is called Hostotitaquillo. Electric power has recently been brought in from a water power generating system a hundred miles away, and all the mines in the territory are now equipped with electrical machinery. The Cinco Minas property is not yet equipped with a mill, but the El Favor mine and another prosperous mine, the Amparo, are already putting out a large product. Many smaller mines in early stages of development are in the same district.

The guards at the Cinco Minas property were armed with rifles and repeating shotguns firing buckshot, and were under command of E. J. Callahan, an ex-Texas ranger, and other Americans. The dispatch yesterday to THE TIMES reported that several of the guards were wounded.

Justice Gerard expressed confidence yesterday in the ability of Gov. Robles Gil to protect American property in the State of Jalisco. This is one of the largest and richest States in Mexico, and all through the Diaz revolution and the present revolt has had a strong government.

"Americans who have interests in Mexico," said Justice Gerard, "can only have patience in the present unsettled condition. They all want Mexico to adjust its own difficulties, just as this country has always done. President Madero and all his family were educated in this country, and they are thoroughgoing business men. American business men have nothing to fear from men of that kind. When the revolution, led by Orozco, is completely put down, the States can then turn their attention to the brigands."

Justice Gerard is the President of the Mexico Society of New York. He has not yet received advices from Mexico to show the loss caused by Friday's attack.

MONEY NO OBJECT TO WILEY.

Pure Food Crusader Will Not Reconsider Offer from Boston.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, former Chief Chemist, declared to-day that he will not reconsider his refusal of the offer of the City of Boston for his services. The question of salary does not influence him, he said to-day, so that an effort in Boston to make him a larger offer will have no effect. He has binding contracts for the present, he said, which forbid his accepting additional work at this time.

"I feel the deepest sense of honor in the offer from the famous old city," continued Dr. Wiley, "but, most emphatically, the question of salary does not enter into the present consideration."

The dispatches said the offer of $7,500 was $1,500 more than Dr. Samuel H. Durgin, the retiring head, received after years of service.

"My prime reason," Dr. Wiley continued, "for not accepting the offer was that my time is absolutely taken up by contracts from which I cannot ask to be released and which are too heavy for me to carry out in the event I had gone to Boston.

"The work there is of such an important character that a man should devote every atom of his strength and mind to it, and this would preclude my dividing attention with other interests. I now have every bit of work I can do without injury to my health, and it is of such a nature that I cannot drop it."

VOTE STATE'S MONEY TO SENATORS' HEIRS

Precedent Established at 1912 Session in Case of Grady and McCarren.

EXPENSIVE STATE FUNERALS

Burial of Assemblyman Nixon Cost $5,624.52—Senator Raines's Funeral Involved Outlay of $3,451.63.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, June 9.—The State Senate of 1911-12 established a precedent in voting the State's money to the heirs of two of its members who had died, one while the Senate was in session and the other while the upper house was in adjournment. In each case the sum of $1,200 was voted to the heirs, besides the payment by the State of the dead members' salaries for the entire term for which elected. Besides these sums, the State paid large amounts for the expenses of legislators in attending the funerals.

The two Senators for whose heirs the precedent was established were Patrick H. McCarren of Brooklyn and Thomas F. Grady of New York. The funeral of Mr. McCarren, outside of the $1,200 to the heirs, cost the State $2,451.63, while that of Senator Grady cost the State $1,810.35. There were six funerals in 1912 which cost the State $5,956.73 by acts of the Legislature. Besides the Grady funeral the State paid these sums for the attendance of members on the other five: Assemblyman James Oliver of New York, $1,181.73; Assemblyman Bradford R. Lansing of Rensselaer, $842.45; Clerk of the Assembly Luke F. McHenry of Chittenango, $844.17; Sergeant at Arms James J. McMahon of Albany, $75, and ex-Senator Harvey J. Donaldson of Ballston Spa, $203.03.

The most expensive of the legislative funerals in the past decade was that of ex-Speaker of the Assembly S. Fred Nixon of Chautauqua, for which the State Controller paid in 1906 the sum of $5,624.52. A special train took the legislative party across the State, and there was no stint placed on expenditures. The same year there was paid for the funeral of Senator Henry S. Ambler of Chatham, thirty miles from Albany, the sum of $308.90.

During the year 1904 there occurred the funeral of Assemblyman Jean L. Burnett, Ontario, costing $3,425.75, and that of Assemblyman William G. Hastings of Orange, $2,356.36, while that of ex-Gov. Frank W. Higgins cost $2,343. Two other Assemblymen received less attention than their fellows. They were William J. Donohue of Kings, for whose funeral $425.75 was expended, and M. C. Stanley of New York, for whose burial $370.07 was paid. That same year for the funeral of ex-Senator Henry J. Coggeshall of Waterville $111.80 was expended.

In 1910 to send the legislators to the funeral of United States T. C. Platt at Owego entailed an outlay of $462.50, while in the same year Senator John Raines was buried with the State's aid at a cost of $3,451.63.

MEN OF VOTING AGE NUMBER 26,999,151

Foreign Born in the Minority as a Whole, but Have a Majority in the Cities.

2,836,773 IN THIS STATE

Half of Whom Are In New York City —About One-Fourth Not Yet Naturalized.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 9.—A preliminary statement of the male population 21 years of age and over distributed according to color, nativity, and parentage, for each State as a total and for each of its cities of over 25,000 inhabitants, as shown by the returns of the thirteenth census, taken as of April 15, 1910, has just been issued by Director Durand of the Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce and Labor. The statistics were prepared under the direction of William C. Hunt, chief statistician for population in the Census Bureau.

Distinction is made in the statement between white males of native and foreign birth, respectively, and also for the native white with respect to parentage. Those having both parents native of the United States are classed as of native parentage; those having either both parents born abroad or one parent native and one parent born abroad are classed as of foreign or mixed parentage. Foreign-born white males who have been naturalized are also separately classified.

The potential voting strength of each State and city is expressed by the number of its males 21 years of age and over, excluding the foreign born who have not become naturalized, but by this is not meant the actual number of voters. It represents, rather, the number of males who from the standpoint of age alone are eligible to vote, aside from any qualifications based upon education, length of residence, or considerations of a like nature imposed by the National or State Government.

There are in all 229 cities which had in 1910 more than 25,000 inhabitants, with an aggregate population of 28,543,816. These cities together contained in 1910 a total of 9,004,422 males of voting age, or 31.5 per cent. of their combined population. For continental United States as a whole, males of voting age numbered 26,999,151, and constituted 29.4 per cent. of the entire population (91,972,266) in 1910.

Of the whole number of males of voting age in the 229 cities taken together, native whites of native parentage number 2,900,244, or 32.2 per cent.; native whites of foreign or mixed parentage, 2,040,907, or 22.7 per cent.; foreign-born whites, naturalized, 1,557,795, or 17.3 per cent.; foreign-born whites, not naturalized, 1,930,816, or 21.4 per cent.; negroes, 519,444, or 5.8 per cent.

The equivalent numbers and percentages for continental United States as a whole are: Native whites of native parentage, 13,211,731, or 48.9 per cent.; native whites of foreign or mixed parentage, 4,498,966, or 16.7 per cent.; foreign-born whites, naturalized, 3,035,333, or 11.2 per cent.; foreign-born whites, not naturalized, 3,611,273, or 13.4 per cent.; negroes, 2,459,327, or 9.1 per cent.

The 9,004,422 males of voting age in the cities of 25,000 or more inhabitants constitute almost one-third of the entire number of males of voting age in the United States. In the case, however, of native whites of native parentage the males of voting age in these cities constitute only 22 per cent. of the total for the United States, while for native whites of foreign or mixed parentage the proportion is 45.4 per cent., for naturalized foreign-born whites 51.3 per cent., and for foreign-born whites not naturalized 53.5 per cent. For negroes the percentage is 21.1.

There are twenty-five principal cities in Massachusetts which together have 846,783 males of voting age, out of a total for the State of 1,021,669. The twenty-one cities in New York together have 1,922,500 males of voting age, out of a total for that State of 2,836,773, and of these 1,433,749 are in New York City alone. Of the other large cities Chicago has 700,590 males of voting age, Philadelphia 468,873, St. Louis 221,913, Boston 208,321, Cleveland 177,396, Pittsburgh 166,424, and Baltimore 163,554.

Three Killed on the Way to Church.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., June 9.—F. E. Zimmer, a farmer of Evans's Mills and his wife and their daughter, Ruth, were killed and another daughter was badly injured when the surrey in which they were driving to church to-day was struck by a train at a crossing in Evans's Mills. A young son of the family, who also was in the rig, escaped uninjured. This is the second family that has been practically wiped out at this crossing with the last few years.

PARCELS POST BILL IS LIKELY TO PASS

Senator Bourne Works Out a Plan That Is Indorsed by the Postmaster General.

EFFECT ON COST OF LIVING

Hitchcock Thinks It Will Enable Farmers to Market Produce Cheaper —Postage Based on Distance.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—For the first time in the efforts to press a genuine Parcels Post bill there now appears to be well-understood co-operation between the Post Office Department and the Senate Post Office Committee, whose Chairman is Senator Jonathan Bourne, and there is expectation that the measure will be passed this session.

Senator Bourne has confined himself unremittingly for months to work on the parcels post question, and has brought out a plan that has received the indorsement of not only the Postmaster General, but of all his subordinates who are skilled men in the practical details of mail transportation. Some of the ideas embraced in the Bourne bill are those of subordinates in the Post Office Department, but the general scope and practical completeness of the bill have resulted from the thoroughly scientific and businesslike investigations of Senator Bourne and his committee.

Postmaster General Hitchcock has submitted a formal report to the Senate recommending the passage of the measure. In commenting on the bill to-day he pointed out its principal features as follows:

"It provides for a general parcel post service throughout the United States and its several territories and possessions, excepting the Philippine Islands. It provides also for a special parcel post on rural routes and in the letter carrier systems of cities and towns. It consolidates the third and fourth classes of mail matter, a reform long advocated by the department, and raises the weight limit to eleven pounds, which is the limit for the international parcel post. Articles as large as seventy-two inches in combined length and girth will be carried provided they are not perishable within the period required for delivery and are not calculated to do damage in transit.

"The rate to be charged for articles carried in the rural route service and city carrier service will be 5 cents for the first pound or fraction of a pound and 1 cent for each additional pound or fraction of a pound. This rate applies to matter mailed at a Post Office from which a rural route starts for delivery on such route, or mailed at any point on such route for delivery elsewhere on the route or at the office from which the route start, or on any other rural route starting from the same office; it applies also to matter mailed at a city carrier office, or at any point within its delivery limits, for delivery in the same city by letter carriers, or mailed at any office for local delivery.

"For the general parcel post service, which covers all mail transportation other than local delivery in the rural route and city carrier services, graduated rates are provided, based on distance.

"Six zones of distance are provided by the bill, the first having a radial distance of 50 miles from the point of mailing. The second includes the area lying between 50 and 200 miles, the third that between 200 and 500 miles, the fourth that between 500 and 1,000 miles, the fifth that between 1,000 and 2,000 miles, and the sixth distances beyond 2,000 miles. The rate for delivery within the first zone is 6 cents for the first pound or fraction of a pound, and 2 cents for each additional pound or fraction of a pound. The rates increase for each additional zone until in the sixth zone they reach a maximum of 12 cents a pound, which is the rate now charged in the international parcel post.

"In order that the distance of a given office of destination from the office of mailing may be readily determined, the country is divided into units of area thirty miles square, each unit being identical with a quarter of the area formed by the intersecting parallels of latitude and meridians of longitude. Each of these units of area is numbered, and all the Post Offices in a given unit receive the same number.

"A chart showing the relation to each Post Office of the units area forming the several zones is prepared for the use of that office, with a key that gives the numbering of the Post Offices, so that they may be promptly located in their proper unit of area and the distance instantly ascertained by reference to the chart. In this manner the method of fixing charges is made comparatively easy, greatly simplifying the handling of the service in this regard.

"The bill provides that the rate of postage on third-class matter weighing not more than four ounces shall be 1 cent for each ounce or fraction of an ounce. In view of the consolidation of the two classes, this rate will apply to mail matter formerly belonging to the fourth class as well as that belonging to the third class.

"It is believed that the enactment of the proposed parcel post bill will materially aid in solving the high cost of living problem, because it will bring the producer and consumer into closer proximity. The rural route service will enable the farmer to send to the town each morning the fresh products of his truck farm or garden and at the same time obtain quickly the small articles he desires to purchase from city stores. This will mean not only a great saving, but will stimulate a larger and more varied production and trade. It will have the effect of bringing more closely together in their commercial and social relations the people of the country and of the city.

"Under the low and carefully graduated scale of postage rates fixed for the several areas, buying and selling by mail orders will be increased, while the production of all classes of merchandise and the growing of farm and garden products will be greatly stimulated."

HOSPITAL DEATH SUSPICIOUS

Complying with a request made on Saturday night to the police in the Fifth Street station by Joseph Kopf of 182 Stanton Street, that the death of his 7-year-old son Abraham, in a White Plains hospital early Saturday morning be investigated, Coroner's Physician Lehane performed an autopsy on the body yesterday, and reported that death was caused by blood poisoning from a stab wound in the neck.

The wound, Dr. Lehane said, was inflicted two or three days before death. The certificate of death, he said, was signed by a physician of the institution, and gave the cause of death as tuberculosis. The father reported to the police that his son had been a patient in the hospital for more than a year, and was suffering, when taken there, from abscesses on the body and legs.

The body was removed on Saturday afternoon from the hospital to the home of Kopf's sister, Mrs. Brenner, 59 Seventh Street. There it was examined by Kopf, who told the police in the Fifth Street Station that he had found black and blue marks on the neck.

The Coroners' Office was notified, and Detectives Allen and Clare were assigned to the case. Coroner Holtzhauser ordered the body removed to the Morgue, and an autopsy was performed. Dr. Lehane said last night that the autopsy revealed the fact that the boy had been stabbed, a few days before he died, in the right side of the neck, the blade of a sharp instrument severing tissues and veins. Blood poisoning, Dr. Lehane said, followed and caused death.

Kopf, after discovering the black and blue spots on the body, called in Dr. Benjamin Block of 79 St. Mark's Place. The physician on Saturday night informed the police in the Fifth Street Station that in his opinion death was not due to abscesses from which the boy was suffering when taken to the institution.

According to Kopf and Dr. Lehane, the boy died in the White Plains Hospital. At that institution it was denied last night that the boy died there.

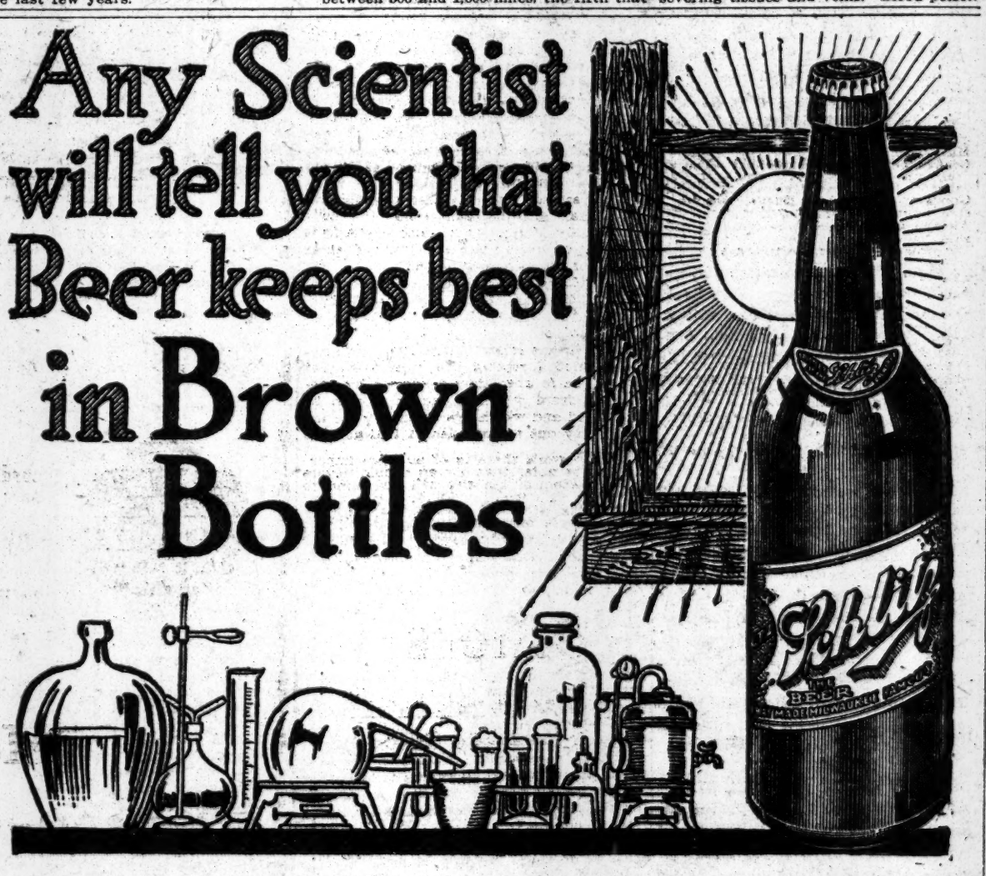
Any Scientist will tell you that Beer keeps best in Brown Bottles



Wahl-Henius Institute of Fermentology, Chicago, writes:

"We have tested beers repeatedly, placing the bottles into direct sunlight, and testing the same after one, two, three and five minutes exposure; found that the beer with three and five minutes exposure became undrinkable on account of the peculiar odor developed. The detrimental effect of light upon beer can be successfully counteracted by the employment of brown or dark colored glass bottles."

UNSCRUPULOUS AND INCOMPETENT.

The hearings in the contest cases before the Republican National Committee disclose unmistakably a plot to buy the Presidency for THEODORE ROOSEVELT. It has failed because of the utter incapacity of his miserable agents. Had their skill been equal to their, and his, unprincipled audacity, if instead of being wretched palterers in chicane and corruption they had been competent in crime, men thoroughly schooled in the higher branches of political villainy, the picture now presented to the eyes of the Nation in Chicago might have been very different. Mr. ROOSEVELT'S buyers and herders of delegates and his organizers of contests were ill-chosen for their tasks. His contests fail, every one of them, and they are seen to be based on such brazen impostures that even his own friends and supporters in the committee are unable to conceal their weariness and disgust.

But the plot stands revealed. While Mr. ROOSEVELT was raising his audiences in the North to the pitch of frenzy, the silent workers in the South, with ample means for their campaign of conveying and converting, were everywhere astir. The crowd round the soapbox in New Jersey yelled, the needy colored brother in Alabama or in Florida advanced to the proffered, well-filled hand, and they called it a Nation in revolt against the bosses. But while the consenting beneficiary of these dirty doings complacently receives at Oyster Bay professors of social uplift come to consult him about good works, the winnowers are at work in Chicago and the chaff in fuglemen have brought to the mill is scattered down the wind.

The intention and design to buy the Presidency have been made clear. It is but too clear, also, that had the plot succeeded, the chief person in interest would have taken the purchased nomination without a scruple. Is he not now prating about "theft" as he sees property upon which he had laid lawless hand confirmed to its rightful owner? But failure in crime does not exculpate. Intent is the essence in this case, and that is proved in the light of all men. The adaptation of the means to the end was never more ridiculously miscalculated, but that is not even a palliation. It only adds contempt to reprobation. The country has never before seen a foray upon the Presidency undertaken with such unscrupulousness and such incapacity. Is it too much to hope that the amazing revelation may give some at least of the poor befooled people in revolt a truer view of the character of their great deliverer?

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

In another column we publish an interesting letter from a gentleman connected with the School of History in the University of Texas. He wishes to know why THE TIMES "pleads so eloquently for the Republican Party," and remarks that, though a Republican himself, he "cannot feel that the country is going to smash even if the Republican Party does."

THE TIMES has "pleaded for the Republican Party" recently only in so far as that party has been menaced with disruption by forces which, we believe, would, if they should prevail, work great harm with the body politic. It has sought to arouse the men of sense and conscience in the party to a realization of the peril to which the party, with the country, is exposed. We have tried from time to time, as occasion offered, to do the same service to the Democratic Party, when, for much the same reasons, it seemed to need it. In the one case, as in the other, our motive, so far as we may be trusted to define it, was not a desire for the advantage of either party, but a profound interest in the welfare of the Nation. We are not greatly concerned with the prospect that the Republican Party as an organization may suffer defeat at the polls, but we certainly are very much concerned with the possible effect of the reckless and insatiate demagogy that has lately threatened it.

Our correspondent thinks that "there will probably always be two leading "parties of almost equal political "strength in American politics." That is a consummation rationally to be wished, but the grounds of his opinion are not obvious. Historical analogy is not very trustworthy, but it so happens that for more than 50 of our 125 years of national existence since the adoption of the Constitution one party was in an almost hopeless minority, and for 40 other years the other was in nearly the same condition. Periods of transition, though inevitable, are likely to be confused and perilous. The present one is peculiarly so because the Republican Party is being rent by the personal ambition of a gifted and cunning leader, appealing almost wholly to a spirit of blind discontent. The tendency is marked not toward the replacement of one strong and capable party by another, but toward the turbulent strife of factions. That is not good for the country; it is bad, and THE TIMES deems it its duty to resist the tendency, with all the influence it may possess, in whatever party may be exposed to it.

NO PARK ENCROACHMENT.

Public Service Commissioner WILLCOX, who served this city some years as Park Commissioner, knows much from experience of the persistence of plans to invade Central Park. The argument from precedent is the favorite one of Park invaders. Every recent scheme to build in Central Park has been supported by the example of the Metropolitan Museum of Art. The law authorizing this encroachment was enacted in the era of the Tweed ring, and while the public has become reconciled to the presence of the beautiful building on land which should never have been built upon, there is no disposition to permit the repetition of this error. Mr. WILLCOX pointed out in a statement published in THE SUNDAY TIMES that if the transfer of the Lenox Library to Central Park is permitted it may be used as a strong argument in favor of reconstructing there the Madison Square Garden when that building is removed from its present site.

No more buildings must be permitted in Central Park. The Municipal Art Commission should be made to feel the force of public opinion in this matter before it takes up the Frick-Stover proposal at its meeting tomorrow.

A BRITISH-GERMAN ENTENTE.

When the replacement of Count WOLFF-METTERNICH, German Ambassador at London, by Baron MARSCHALL VON BIEBERSTEIN was announced, it was given out that it was a move in the interest of an understanding between Germany and Great Britain. Events have since made it clear that Count METTERNICH was not released because of any laxness in working for such an understanding, but because in his own words: "After years of "work, which was not always quite "easy, comes the time when one "yearns for repose." And in the speech delivered on the eve of his departure from London, he foreshadowed with a good deal of clearness the task of his successor in these hopeful sentences:

> I retire from my post the more willingly in that, as I confidently believe, I hand over to my successor an easier task than that which fell to my lot. The moment is auspicious. Unless all signs are deceptive, an impulse for reconciliation and peaceful neighborliness is passing through the two great peoples, the English and the German. Here is a fruitful field for statesmanship, and it will repay the toil of noble minds to pursue its cultivation. It was my task to prepare. I hope and trust that it may be vouchsafed to my successor to see the ripening of the fruits.

Here is a distinct implication that while the outgoing Ambassador has labored successfully to prevent war, often amid trying and perilous conditions, the work of the new Ambassador may be to lay the foundations of peace and friendship under conditions much more favorable.

How will it be done? One way much discussed, we fear, will be found impracticable. Neither nation in the present situation in Europe will consent to reduce its armament. Germany for many years will deem it needful to maintain the strongest army in the world and Great Britain the strongest navy. The most that can be expected is that terms might be reached which would justify the two nations in suspending additions to their respective forces. The real point of difficulty lies in the policy that each may pursue in the use of these forces. It is toward this that the work of diplomacy will be directed.

On the negative side, it does not seem that the task should be hopeless or even very discouraging. The basis of the irritation that undoubtedly exists in each nation is a suspicion that the purpose of the other is aggressive, and this suspicion breeds in each a half-unconscious desire to strike the first blow. If the two Governments could reach a clear agreement that neither would take the aggressive, or failing that, if each could give the other a sincere assurance to the same effect, the greatest peril to the peace of the world would, for a long time at least, be removed.

Back of this phase of the relations of the two nations, however, lies another matter more concrete, in some respects more difficult to deal with, and of the greatest importance. A feeling exists in Germany amounting to a conviction that Great Britain is willfully opposing that expansion, commercial and political, which is the cherished aim of the German Nation. This aim is not only legitimate but inevitable. It is the natural outcome of the remarkable traits of the German character and intellect. It has been pursued with great energy and skill, and with a degree of success unprecedented in modern history. It will not be, and simply can not be, abandoned voluntarily by the Germans. You might as well ask them to go back to their life in the forest and fields which TACITUS describes. The question for the British and German Governments to solve is how to provide for legitimate and inevitable German expansion without dangerous friction between the two nations.

The chief difficulty that arises is the fact that expansion, political and commercial, has already gone so far in the case of Great Britain that the field for Germany is relatively restricted. That, however, should be recognized by the statesmen of Great Britain as a reason why the greatest practicable freedom should be conceded to Germany within that field. It is fortunate that in the matter of trade the present Government of Great Britain holds to the sound principle of free exchange, and can see that where German commerce goes and the open door is maintained gain will follow for all nations. In the matter of political expansion the problem is more thorny. But since the problem really is whether agreement or ultimate war is the more advantageous to all concerned, its solution should not be beyond the powers of sound statesmanship. It is a matter for congratulation that there is a disposition on both sides to approach it in the interest of "reconciliation and peaceful neighborliness."

THE SITUATION IN CUBA.

The movement of American troops to Cuba does not signify intervention. It is the duty of our Government to render such help as may be needed to the Government of Cuba in the protection of life and property. The indications are that the Cubans, who are thoroughly aroused to the peril of their situation, will be able now to suppress the rebellion which threatens the stability of the republic without much if any aid from the United States other than the restraining influence of the presence of American soldiers and marines on Cuban soil.

If intervention is found necessary, if the Cubans are compelled a second time to ask the United States to take charge of their affairs and restore order, it does not follow that our troops will not be withdrawn after order is restored. We are not aware of any desire of the American people to possess Cuba. The individual opinion of any American citizen in this matter, whatever office he may fill or may have filled, counts for no more than the opinion of one man.

We sincerely hope, however, that intervention will be unnecessary, and the present outlook encourages that hope. The race riots in Havana are serious, to be sure, but the Government's ability to quell such local outbreaks is not to be doubted as yet. Senator NELSON of Minnesota intimated in a speech introducing a resolution on Saturday that the negro revolt had been financed and otherwise encouraged in this country. It is not news that there are mischiefmakers here who have been working more or less in the dark for the annexation of Cuba. But Senator NELSON made the same charge about the Orozco rebellion in Mexico, and it is difficult to see what advantage to any Americans could accrue from that. In the circumstances, Mr. NELSON'S assertion does not carry conviction with it. In any case we are quite sure that Cuban intervention will never be brought about by such means.

THE WARSHIPS TO BE BUILT.

The Senate Committee on Naval Affairs has wisely restored to the Naval Appropriation bill the provision for building two new dreadnoughts this year. These warships will be of 30,000 tons displacement and carry ten 14-inch guns. They are to cost not more than $7,425,000 each. Other amendments made by the Senate Committee to the House bill are commendable.

The restoration of the grades of Admiral and Vice Admiral in a navy the size of ours is desirable. The House provision forbidding the Government to purchase powder was doubtless well meant, but if the supply of powder manufactured by the Government should be accidentally cut off in time of trouble the law would be ignored as a matter of course. Therefore the provision has been removed. Powder will not be bought if the supply from the Government's factory is adequate.

The House majority has been so severely condemned for its mistaken attempt to block the development of our navy, which would soon fall to fifth place among the navies of the world if at least two new ships were not built every year, that it is not likely that the Senate's amendments will be hotly contested now. The two new dreadnoughts are needed, and the amount by which the Senate amendments have increased the year's appropriation for the navy, $15,062,537, seems inconsiderable in comparison with the huge sum of the people's money voted for service pensions.

MR. J. K. TAYLOR'S RETIREMENT.

The retirement of Mr. JAMES KNOX TAYLOR from the position of Supervising Architect of the Treasury Department after fifteen years of excellent service is greatly regretted. Mr. TAYLOR was appointed to succeed the late Mr. W. M. AIKEN after having passed a civil service examination, and has administered the affairs of his office with zeal, integrity, and admirable comprehension of its requirements. Coincident with the retirement of Mr. TAYLOR is the repeal of the Tarnsey act of 1893, effected by a clause in the Sundry Civil bill inserted by the House Democrats in their pursuit of false economy.

The Tarnsey act provided for competitions for important public buildings under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury and the Supervising Architect. It instituted a new era in Federal architecture. The various Federal buildings, which were often a source of public regret if not of shame, (instance the Mullet New York Post Office now to be removed,) have been greatly improved throughout the country. Results of the competitions have been the New York Custom House, the Cleveland Federal Building, the Baltimore Custom House, the Denver Post Office, the San Francisco Custom House, and other public buildings of a fine type.

The work of Mr. TAYLOR has been exacting, and has been performed with large ability. His successor will find it difficult to live up to the standard of excellence he has maintained, especially with the Tarnsey act suppressed by an economical Congress which cares but little for art and architecture.

New York's contribution to the fund for the relief of the Mississippi Flood sufferers was substantially increased on Saturday by the sum of $6,210 collected through the Stock Exchange. But New York is expected to give much more, as the amount thus far received from all sources by the various relief committees in the flooded districts does not nearly meet the immediate requirements, and support or partial support will be needed by many thousands of persons for months to come. Various benefit entertainments have been arranged for the cause, but the fund must depend largely on individual contributions.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Piling Up Slander on Slander. Certain prominent anti-vivisectionists recently drew up, and certain other prominent persons, who think themselves anti-vivisectionists because they hate cruelty to animals, guilelessly signed, a document accusing Dr. HIDEYO NOGUCHI, a biologist and pathologist of world-wide reputation, of subjecting helpless hospital patients to a particularly dangerous and repulsive infection. This indictment was drawn by taking a published article by Dr. NOGUCHI himself and, by deliberately misstating some of the things he wrote and as deliberately suppressing others, creating among the ignorant and thoughtless the impression that this man of beneficent genius was an inhuman monster spreading loathsome diseases in the name of science.

Nothing worse than this was ever done by the would-be suppressors of animal experimentation, and it seemed as if nothing more despicable could be done, even by those most reckless of public enemies. That difficult task, however, has been not only attempted, but accomplished, by Life, a weekly paper which not infrequently justifies its existence by being amusing. For Life, though perfectly well aware that the accusations against Dr. NOGUCHI were instantly answered and absolutely refuted—that he had done nothing even remotely resembling what he was charged with doing, but had, on the contrary, made in a perfectly legitimate way a highly important contribution to the diagnostic side of medicine—succeeds in adding to the crime it committed when it supported his miserable slanderers.

Not only does Life refuse to Dr. NOGUCHI the poor reparation of an apology, not only does it refrain even from mentioning the utter downfall of the anti-vivisection case against him, but it in effect repeats the charges in a cynical and sneering pretense of wonder that a man who uses mice and monkeys in the study of pathological conditions should deem it necessary or worth while to "deny hotly" that he had been guilty of "inoculating 146 persons with a virulent "blood disease."

This passes even the anti-vivisection limit of decency. To put the truth more accurately, it sets a new standard of anti-vivisection indecency and must fill with despairing jealousy even the most expert of the rival calumniators in a group that contains no tyros in the making and distributing of lies.

A Compromise as to Fee Splitting. While in convention at Atlantic City the American Medical Association composed, discussed, and adopted a new "code of ethics" for the guidance of its members in their dealings as professional men with the public and with each other. While much longer than the Hippocratic oath, which served the doctors—such of them as observed it—fairly well for so many centuries, it differs in essentials but little. In detail, however, the new "Principles of Medical Ethics" recognize the vast extensions of the healing art and the existence of conditions unknown of old.

Notable among the changes is that which has produced the medical specialist in all his varieties and the consequent frequent necessity for the "general practitioner" to transfer patients to the care of men who know, or are supposed to know, more about one narrowly limited domain of medicine than any man can possibly know about all of its now almost numberless divisions. Particularly interesting to the public is the part of the new code devoted to that hotly debated subject, the paying of commissions to physicians by surgeons, commonly referred to as "fee splitting." Here is the law as now laid down:

> It is detrimental to the public good and degrading to the profession, and, therefore, unprofessional, to give or to receive a commission or to divide a fee for medical advice or surgical treatment, unless the patient or his next friend is fully informed as to the terms of the transaction. The patient should be made to realize that a proper fee should be paid the family physician for the service he renders in determining the surgical or medical treatment suited to the condition, and in advising concerning those best qualified to render any special service that may be required by the patient.

Had that paragraph ended with the word "treatment" it would have been, a good many people in as well as out of the medical profession will believe, quite long enough. It would then have expressed, and fully, the conviction of many eminent doctors and surgeons, and of many others who would only claim to be honestly and scrupulously devoted to the interests of their patients. As it stands it is an evident compromise, and indicates that the fee splitters have become so numerous that some sort of a concession had to be made to them.

One can only rejoice that the secret payment of commissions has been declared officially to be a professional crime. That the thing can be done openly to any great extent is at least dubious, for it will take much courage for any doctor to avow that financial benefit to himself comes from the man to whom he sends his patients. Of course the thing could be done quite honestly, but temptation lies that way.

Classroom Criticism of Professors. A correspondent who expressed his ideas with a facility and vivacity possessed by few who would sign their letters to the editor with the word "Soph" made on this page Saturday the dreadful accusation that there be university professors, or at least university instructors, who are capable of "marking" a student, not in just appraisement of scholarly abilities and achievements, but to punish the pupil for knowing more than his teacher.

This charge, though dreadful, is not unbelievable, for instructors, and even professors, are not so high above ordinary humanity as never to be influenced by private resentments, personal prejudices, and the desire to get even for humiliations suffered at the hands of classroom critics. Indeed, a teacher would be altogether inhuman if he did not let his markings be influenced when he thought or knew that a boy made a point of seeking and utilizing opportunities to catch him in one of the little errors and inaccuracies of which even the wisest is guilty now and then. Lowering the rank of such a boy might be fully justified on the ground of his grossly bad manners.

Our correspondent insisted that the students whose wrongs he rehearsed were justified in their persistent criticism of their instructors because the latter were incompetent. That, too, is possible. Undergraduates are not the best of judges of a teacher's merit, but neither are they the worst, and the chances are that they are much more often right than wrong in liking and respecting one of their overlords and in disliking and despising another.

As to the cases to which "Soph" referred we can have no opinion, but what he wrote was at least enough to start a Faculty investigation if those at whom he was aiming, as seems likely, can be recognized from his lively description.

PROSPECT PARK INVADED.

Brooklynite Asks Why Site Was Given to New Library.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In view of the sharp agitation raised against any further usurpation of Central Park by public buildings, it is entertaining to see Brooklyn giving her finest bit of park corner—at Flatbush Avenue and Eastern Parkway—to a new library, and without any noticeable public outcry. The architects who have been staggering in their attempts to create a "Brooklyn Beautiful" have protested against this outrage, which destroys the finest vista in the town, but Brooklyn was evidently too divided between preparations for the Sunday school parade and the amateur circus at Bay Ridge to hear them. The Brooklyn Public Library might have been satisfied with some of the waste lands which dodge assessments under the guise of park lands for its new central building, but for some unknown reason it chose the most prominent corner at the most prominent entrance of Prospect Park, a site hopelessly out of consonance with any architectural scheme for the development of the plaza.

I asked an old Brooklynite about these things. He admitted that the site of the new library was a blunder that would come into the faces of future generations, let alone the bald theft of fine park lands.

"But, my dear boy," he protested, "you don't understand. It is delightfully Brooklyn—so different from Manhattan. It is typically Brooklyn."

And I, for my part, must confess that I do not understand. EDWARD HUNGERFORD.

REPUBLICAN PARTY'S INTEGRITY

Why Should It Not "Go to Smash" for a Season?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

THE TIMES has long been classed as an independent paper rather than an organ of either of the two great parties, and frequently—to the gratification of its many admirers—it takes exception to policies and proceedings on the part of both of them. Why, then, does a paper with as enviable a reputation for that kind of disinterestedness plead so eloquently for the Republican Party? What if that party does meet with its downfall in November? The undersigned is himself a Republican, but he cannot feel that the country is going to smash even if the Republican Party does.

There will probably always be two leading parties of almost equal political strength in American politics, and the paralysis of the Republican Party or even its nominal extinction can hardly mark more than a temporary stage in our political history, somewhat analogous, indeed, to the situation of the Democratic Party after it was rent by the silver issue. And even though that latter party was fourteen years in recovering—quite a needless length of time, by the way—it has at last managed to marshal its forces, and has now a unique opportunity of meeting the popular wishes and justifying a reward.

How, then, does the salvation of the country or its institutions hinge upon the staying power or even the integrity of the Republican Party? Indeed, somehow in the new era of popular rule lately furthered by the primary innovation the country would seem further than ever removed from the danger of tyranny. Now, by a process of elimination we may yet get a really good President. T. W. RIKER.

"The Maker's Name."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Bill 16,844, referred to in your editorial Saturday, entitled "The Maker's Name," was introduced in the House of Representatives Jan. 4, 1912, by Mr. Campbell of Kansas. Six days later the New York Board of Trade and Transportation directed its Committee on Legislation to explain to a committee of Congress the bad effect such a law would have. The result was, we have understood, that the idea of applying it to anything but food products was soon abandoned. Then the uselessness and injustice of applying it to food products became apparent. Later we suggested that the principle embodied in New York State's new weights and measures law (Chapter 81, Laws of 1912,) would cover all public requirements; that, viz., the name appearing on the container or label, together with the marking as to contents, "shall be deemed to constitute a guarantee." It was so manifest that such guarantee was all that the public needs that we are assured the bill will not be passed.

Would Embargo Meat Experts.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If the packers are still exporting meat out of this country, and particularly to England, in large quantities, and if the packers are selling their meats in the English markets for less than they are selling them for in this country, I think an embargo should be placed upon the exporting of meat to the extent of a tax which would be prohibitory. ## WOMEN MAYORS IN KANSAS.

The Late Mrs. Lowman Was the Second of Twenty-five.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

An item in this morning's paper referring to the death of Mrs. Mary D. Lowman says she was "the first woman to be elected Mayor of an American town." This is not quite correct, as Mrs. Lowman was the second woman to hold that office in this country. The "History of Woman Suffrage," written in 1900, refers to women Mayors as follows:

> About twenty-five women have been elected to the office of Mayor in Kansas. In several instances the entire Board of Aldermen have been women. The business record of these women has been invariably good, and their industrious efforts to improve sanitation, schools, sidewalks, and to advance the other interests of their town, have been generously seconded and aided by the men of their community. Among the most prominent of the women Mayors were Mrs. Mary D. Lowman of Oskaloosa, Mrs. Minnie D. Morgan of Cottonwood Falls, and Mrs. Antoinette Haskell of Gaylord. Mrs. Lowman, the second woman to be elected, conducted a great work in improving the conditions of the municipality morally and physically.
>
> She held her office two terms with entire boards of women Aldermen, and refused to serve a third term, saying that she and her boards had accomplished the work they set out to do. They retired with much honor and esteem, having made a creditable amount of street improvements and left the Treasury with more money than they found in it. Mrs. Morgan is editor with her husband of a Republican newspaper, an officer in the Woman's State Press Association, and holds high official position in the Woman's Relief Corps. Mrs. Haskell is the wife of a prominent lawyer and politician. She held the office of Mayor for two terms, and the last time her Board of Aldermen were women. Her administration of municipal affairs was so satisfactory that she was besought to accept a third term, but declined.

A $200,000 FEE.

John Martin So Terms the Proposed Fund for Miss Strachan.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The proposal, over which you are righteously indignant, to solicit from the women teachers of New York City a fund of $200,000 for Miss Grace Strachan for her services in securing increases of salary for women, accompanied by vengeful decreases for men, may be viewed in another way.

Why should not the recipients of an extra $3,000,000 a year pay some commission to their leader? Without her leadership their claims would not have been conceded. Under her skillful political guidance they, the voteless women, whipped the voting men to a frazzle. They lobbied at Albany so potently that every member of the Black Horse Cavalry, every man who declared to fellow-members that he would not vote for lucrative measures till he got his share, was more enthusiastic for the Salary bill than for any other legislation. The bill was passed at midnight with a hurrah under the false representation that the Board of Estimate and the Board of Education both desired it—a trick easily played, since, so far as can be ascertained, no member of the Legislature had read through the salary schedules and conditions which were so gayly written into the City Charter. The women had outwitted the Board of Education, so that members who had voted for their schedules merely to shunt the disagreeable duty on to the Board of Estimate and to put that body in a hole, were unable later, when the bluff was called, to kill the measure. The women have terrorized officials until, to-day, few dare mention their claims except "with bated breath and whispering humbleness." Under the pretense of bringing peace to the schools they deluded powerful members of the Board of Education into recanting long-cherished opinions and into establishing a condition which those members now confess is one of worse strife, dissatisfaction, and confusion than ever existed before.

And all this generalship not worth $200,000! Why, Sir, that would be less than 6 per cent. of one year's gains. Domestic servants would pay more to an employment agency. Why should a brutal Board of Education baffle generous impulses? And this is only the preliminary skirmish. The fighting chiefs of the feminine revolt will be content with nothing short of the capture of every position in the school system from City Superintendent down to substitute teacher—a consummation, I am authoritatively informed, already attained in Idaho. To-day the end of men's services in the elementary schools is in sight. At the latest examination, in consequence of the reductions of salary, only eleven qualified instead of from fifty to eighty as in previous years. Men are deserting the training schools.

It is useless to show that a modicum of masculine influence is good for the children. What matter the children in such a contest? The defenders of the children are only a corporal's guard. The children cannot give banquets, cannot send bouquets to susceptible officials, cannot pay fat fees to lawyers (who happen, oddly enough, also to be legislators.) Why should the children be considered?

The Demagogue.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is a well-known psychological fact that the prestige and power that some men possess paralyze the critical faculties of their supporters. This prestige seems to have a hypnotic influence upon unthinking people. The undercurrent of discontent and agitation that exists among the laboring classes in all business enterprises is not altogether the result of our economic conditions, although it must be admitted that this discontent is to a large extent caused by the greed of our corporations, and the monopolistic tendencies of the times, resulting in its inequality of opportunity.

This agitation and discontent is greatly stimulated and aggravated by artificial means through the demagogue in public life going up and down the country putting forth his false theories of government and quack remedies, which are taken up and carried forward by the ignorant and unthinking masses.

Extortionate Expressage.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Last Friday I expressed from Greenwich, Conn., to Seabright, N. J., two packages, both of which, together, weighed fifty-three pounds. The company charged me $2.10. Now on the same day, by using my commutation tickets, it was possible for me to travel from Greenwich, Conn., to Seabright, N. J., for 66 cents, this including my trolley fare from the Grand Central Station to the pier.

The express company actually charges ten times the proportionate passenger rate for the transmission of an express package. This charge is made on a delayed delivery, and on top of this excessive charge and poor service the company seeks to protect itself against all possible liability for damage it might do.

Carlyle on the Campaign.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Is not the following Carlylian quotation apposite in its relation to the present remarkable Presidential contest?

> Under the sky is no uglier spectacle than two men with clenched teeth and hell-fire eyes, hacking one another's flesh; converting precious living bodies and priceless living souls into nameless masses of putrescence, useful only for turnip manure. How did a chivalry ever come out of that; how anything that was not hideous, scandalous, infernal?

"Pogoniate."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I beg the liberty of stating to THE TIMES that "pogoniate" had me guessing. Nor would Webster, even unabridged, succor me in my extremity. But Stormonth gave me "pogon," (the beard,) and though he relates its especial significance to botany, I am now content in the knowledge of what was meant—that the majority of the ruffians under notice are virtually no more than shavers, and so not yet shavers. See?

UNTERMYER INVITES CRITICS TO TESTIFY

Counsel to Committee Investigating Money Trust Anxious to Examine Anonymous Detractors.

HE WRITES TO VANDERLIP

Lawyer Tells Chairman of Clearing House Committee Investigators Are Anxious to Hear All Sides.

Members of the Clearing House Association who have criticised in anonymous interviews testimony adduced on Friday before the Congressional Committee which is investigating the Money Trust were challenged yesterday by Samuel Untermyer, the committee's counsel, to appear before the committee at its next session on Tuesday and testify about the matters they have discussed. The challenge is contained in a letter which Mr. Untermyer wrote to Frank A. Vanderlip, Chairman of the committee of the Clearing House Association. The letter follows:

> Frank A. Vanderlip, Esq., Scarborough, N. Y.
>
> Dear Sir: I observe from last evening's and this morning's newspapers very full and circumstantial reports distributed through The Associated Press and otherwise of interviews with anonymous members of the Clearing House Committee, in which these unnamed gentlemen take issue with the sworn testimony of Messrs. Jones, Hewitt, and Beekman and with certain statements contained in the letter of Mr. Hugh Kelly, now deceased, as adduced before the Committee on Banking and Currency on Friday last.
>
> I am instructed by the Chairman of the committee to write you as Chairman of the Committee of the Clearing House Association that if these undisclosed gentlemen who take this irresponsible method of trying their side of the case in the newspapers, as against the sworn testimony of witnesses, care to disclose their identity, the committee will be pleased to hear them at the next session on Tuesday morning next at 11 o'clock, in Room 428 of the Custom House.
>
> The committee is above all things anxious in the performance of the legitimate functions of the inquiry to elicit the truth, and will gladly welcome the testimony of every one who can contribute to that result.
>
> The committee desires above all things that the inquiry shall be judicial and impartial in the last degree and that no injustice shall be done. To that end it is prepared at all times to accept all testimony that may be offered from every responsible direction bearing upon any question under investigation. Very truly yours,
>
> SAMUEL UNTERMYER.
> Of Counsel to Committee.

Mr. Untermyer wrote the letter after a conference with Representative Pujo, Chairman of the committee, at Mr. Untermyer's home, Greystone, Yonkers.

MANNISH GIRLS A MENACE.

Christian Endeavor Founder Sees In Them Danger to Civilization.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, June 9.—The Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark, founder of the United Society of Christian Endeavor and the World's Christian Endeavor Union, to-day denounced the lack of spiritual training received by the girl graduate of modern times as a tendency toward the destruction of the best traditions of womanhood.

"I believe that women should be physically perfect, and that sound bodies should be developed with sound minds," said Dr. Clark. "No one can minimize the importance of careful training along these lines, but infinitely more important is the growth of the same spiritual strength that our grandmothers and mothers gave to the upbuilding of civilization.

"Mannish manners, uncouth, and often almost vulgar speech seem to have become the characterizing peculiarity of the modern college girl. The modern education of women is rapidly working toward the elimination of the gentle, spiritual and altogether lovable type of womanhood that has enobled manhood and been the greatest of all civilizing factors in the history of the world.

"Physical and intellectual development are necessary, but when both become so important in the education of women that all other womanly attainments are forgotten, we may well be alarmed for the future of our homes and institutions. The slang of the college girl of to-day and her affectation of mannish manners of speech and dress are abominable."

MAKING POSTERITY PAY

For New State Roads That Speedily Wear Out.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the course of an editorial article on "Roads of Low First Cost" you say:

> The road builders of this State have not looked far enough into the future. Already many of the new roads built under the $50,000,000 appropriation have been practically destroyed, and the cost of maintenance of the rest amounts annually to a large percentage of their first cost.

If the road builders failed to look far enough into the future the legislators certainly did not, for the immense sum of $50,000,000 which is so rapidly being spent for roads that wear out in a few years has been raised by the sale of bonds running for fifty years. This is looking into the future with a vengeance—a veritable mortgaging of posterity seldom equaled in all the reckless financing which has been done by American States and cities.

Whatever may be thought of the wisdom of issuing state bonds for local highway construction, certainly all sane public economists will agree that the life of the bonds for any public work ought not to exceed the life of the works themselves.

It seems pertinent to inquire whether the proposed second $50,000,000 loan is also to be for fifty years.

A Change of Heart.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The humors of the suffrage campaign compensate a little for its wearisome platitudes and repetitions. Mrs. Blatch, "cooing as gently as any sucking dove," must make the gentlemen at Albany rub their eyes, if any of them chance to see her motherly effusion in your issue of Sunday last.

The irate lady who so belabored them last Winter has suffered a "sea change." Indeed, no longer ago than the date of the California primaries her voice rang across the continent in tones not characterized by patience, calling upon the women of California to vote for Roosevelt, to destroy from the face of the earth their enemy Taft. Poor Mr. Taft, who had done all that he could for them except march in their parade!

Nothing could be funnier, unless perhaps the spectacle of the Rev. Anna Shaw preaching the doctrine of universal peace!

A CONTINGENCY.

If by some chance the fluctuating feelings
Of voters of the Grand Old Party brand
Should set aside, despite his strong appealings,
The present head of this our happy land;
If they should give us in his stead another,
A Colonel, who in other, sweeter days,
Was wont to call this head his friend and brother,
And fill the people with his constant praise;
Say, on the day of his inauguration,
When both of them must drive the Avenue
Between the White House and the halls of legislation,
Will they drive in one carriage then, or two?

OLYMPIC TEAM CUT FOR LACK OF FUNDS

American Committee Needs $25,000 to Send All Point Winners to Stockholm.

EXPENSES WILL BE $135,000

Try-Out Meets Help Much and Col. Robert M. Thompson's Offer Is Still Open.

The absolute necessity for more funds for the support of the American Olympic team is clearly indicated by the quasi-official announcement that the make-up of the aggregation will be without the services of a number of men whose competitive qualities warrant their selection by the committee, unless the fund is materially increased, and by an amount which should be at least $25,000.

That the team which is expected to prove victorious next month in Stockholm promises to be smaller than originally intended is mainly due to the lukewarmness of many who should step up to the "Captain's office," according to one of the committee.

Ninety thousand dollars is the total amount available at the present time, which came to the committee in the shape of subscriptions and gate money, which probaly includes the "gate" of Saturday at the Cambridge Stadium. Forty-five thousand dollars is the accumulated amount of the sale of reservations on the Finland, the ship chartered by the committee for the transportation of the competitive forces in which the hopes of the United States are centred.

"There is strength in numbers" is the slogan of the athletic devotees who are patriotically giving up their time and money to the furtherance of American success at the fifth Olympic games. Not a few members of the Selection Committee, however, deplore the lack of numbers, while admitting the strength of those who stand out as the accepted best of the various sections of the union in which try-outs have been held for the purpose of getting a more accurate line on the abilities of those who are expected to add to the American supremacy established in former Olympic meets.

In many circles there is an impression that the coming invasion will be made by a band of track and field men solely. That this is wrong is evidenced by the fact that the team will be most representative of the sports of the States. There will be riflemen, revolver experts, trap shooters, cyclists, swimmers, wrestlers, gymnasts, tennis players, fencers, and those engaged in the horse riding competitions, as well as the track men and an oarsman.

In almost every game the governing associations of the sports named have contributed as best they could to aiding the cause, but it is asserted in some quarters that had not the announcement been made some time since to the effect that Col. Robert M. Thompson, President of the American Olympic Committee, would stand behind the committee financially, no matter what the amount needed, there would have been a more general and a larger subscription.

While Col. Thompson has clearly shown that he meant every word he said in his generous offer, his fellow-members on the committee feel that he should not be expected to shoulder a responsibility which is clearly not a one-man affair, but a matter of National moment and one which every citizen should feel obligated to support.

The prospects of American success, which were most forcibly brought to the attention of probably 20,000 persons last Saturday by the wonderful ability displayed by most of the nominations, does not lure the members of the committee to become absolutely assured that such a state of affairs will obtain abroad just because of the wonderful performance in nearly every department in track and field work.

Statistics show that fully 50 per cent. of the men who have journeyed to previous Olympic Games "have gone bad"—that is, that travel and climate have worked havoc with their competitive pretensions. Therefore, the reason, as given by the committee, for the seeming large number of men who must engage in the invasion if it is to be as successful as anticipated.

It is estimated that at least 150 men will constitute the entire competitive forces. Of this number more than two-fifths will be engaged in other sports than track and field. As there are twenty-five events in which the track men will participate and in which there can be little doubling up by the contestants, it can readily be seen that with the number of men it is now possible to send very few defections will be possible without really endangering the chances of victory. It has been found that men who had never been shown to be brilliant performers, but who were considered as second or third string men, have been among the most valuable to former teams. Harking back to the 1906 sports in Athens, Paul Pilgrim is remembered. He was almost forced on the team, but proved his worth by running "better than he knew" in the 400 meters and 800 meters, both of which he won, after the first-string men had all but "blown up."

The committee is afraid that the lack of funds may fail to bring to life another Pilgrim—some runner or athlete who, if the fund were sufficient, would be taken, but who, because of the financial stringency and lack of support of the team by the public, will have to remain at home.

Up to date the money subscribed would not take a representative team to Stockholm on the Finland or any other similar craft, and the plea of the committee is for $25,000, which would enable it to close up the reservation end of the matter, and take up the proposition of sending enough men to make success sure.

It is generally conceded that the scheme of taking the athletes to Stockholm on the Finland is a most admirable one. They at once escape the need for changing from steamer to train several times before Stockholm can be reached, and are at once under the eyes of those in charge of the team. The handling of 150 athletes is not to be considered a light task, according to one of the committee, who has been through the work on several occasions.

On board ship the men will not be harassed by having to select food usually nominated on the menu of an ocean liner, but will have the diet prescribed by the coach, Mike Murphy, and Manager Halpin. They will have one entire dining saloon to themselves, with another to be used by those who will make the trip in order to be with the men and assure them of their support.

On shipboard the men will continue such work as outlined by the coach. A running track has been fixed up; shot putting places arranged for, and an improvised swimming pool placed in which the men named for that sport can take their exercise.

Mrs. Virginia C. S. Hall to Wed.

The engagement was announced yesterday of Mrs. Virginia Carey Smith Hall of 51 West Forty-eighth Street, Bayonne, daughter of the late A. Carey Smith, yacht designer, to Eugene Worman Bolling of Bayonne.

Sothern and Marlowe to Aid Actors' Fund.

E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe will close their regular season of thirty-three weeks in Shakespearean repertoire at the Teck Theatre, Buffalo, next Saturday evening. On Monday evening they will give a single performance of "The Taming of the Shrew" at the Broadway Theatre for the benefit of the Actors' Fund of America. Mr. Sothern and Miss Marlowe have given a special performance for the benefit of the fund every season since they joined forces. The sale of seats will begin at the Broadway Theatre this morning.

SILVER SET FOR THE REID.

Descendants of Commodore Reid Make a Gift to the Torpedo Boat.

The U. S. torpedo boat destroyer Reid, flagboat of Lieutenant Commander John S. Doddridge, commanding the First Division of the Atlantic Torpedo Boat Flotilla, is the first vessel of her type to be presented with a silver service. Battleships, crisers, and gunboats, are all remembered by the States and cities after which they are named, but the torpedo boats, which perpetuate the names of men famous in the naval history of the United States had always been overlooked until yesterday, when the descendants of Commodore Samuel Chester Reid, U. S. N., presented to the destroyer a copy of the silver service presented to Commodore Reid by the citizens of New York City in 1815.

The service consists of a large bowl and two elaborately engraved goblets. About fifteen of Commodores Reid's descendants were present at the presentation of the service, which was accepted for the Navy Department by Lieutenant Commander Doddridge. Ensigns David F. Ducey and H. T. Markland, the junior officers of the Reid were the only other naval officers present. A luncheon followed the presentation.

Commodore Reid for whom the destroyer, one of the fastest in the world, was named, was one of the most famous of all the naval officers in the war of 1912. After the war he came to New York as Port Warden. He established the Sandy Hook Lightship, recognized the American pilot system, and perfected the signal telegraph. H eplanned the present American flag, adopted in 1818, providing for thirteen permanent stripes, the stars increasing in number with the admission of new States. Commodore Reid died in 1861.

The Reid will sail from New York for Newport to-day where twenty of the fastest torpedo boats in the navy are being assembled for a speed endurance test on the 19th of this month. On that day the vessels will steam for eight hours in the open sea and some of the fastest and most exciting steaming in the history of the American Navy is expected.

BURNED IN HER CRIB.

Neighbor Saved 3 of Mrs. Schwartz's Children, but Did Not See Baby.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Schwartz left their four small children in their ground floor apartment in the six-story tenement at 445 St. Ann's Avenue, the Bronx, yesterday morning and went to their grocery store a few blocks further along the street. Three of the children—7-year-old Philip, 4-year-old Sadie, and 2-year-old Rose—were sleeping in a rear bedroom. The 9-months-old baby Rebecca lay in the front parlor in a crib.

While the parents were gone neighbors and passersby noticed flames and smoke issuing from the open windows of the apartment. Knowing that Mrs. Schwartz was away, Miss Rose Friedman ran down stairs from the third floor and into the smoke-filled apartment through the unlocked door of the kitchen. She roused the three children in the bedroom and carried them out into the street.

Policeman Schumway of the Morrisania Station meantime turned in an alarm which brought Battalion Chief Callahan and all the fire apparatus of the district. It took the firemen about twenty minutes to put out the flames in the Schwartz apartment, and no one knew that the 9-months-old baby was in a crib in the blazing front room until Mrs. Schwartz came running back from her grocery.

Mrs. Schwartz tried to force her way into the burning room, but was restrained by the firemen. The baby was found burned to death in the charred crib. When she learned this Mrs. Schwartz fainted. She was revived by Dr. Eddy of Lincoln Hospital, whose services were also required for the three rescued children and for Miss Friedman, all of whom had inhaled a great deal of smoke. The fire was confined to the Schwartz apartment, to which $200 damage was done.

The fire is believed to have been started by a lighted match carelessly thrown into the open front window by a passing smoker in the street.

NURSERY MAIDS STRIKE.

Seven Walk Out When Miss Howard Resigns from Infants' Hospital.

Miss Louise T. Howard, whose administration of the Nursery and Infants' Hospital, at 400 Herkimer Street, Brooklyn, was severely criticised during the trial of Winifred Ankers for murder, has resigned from that institution. No information about the reason for this step could be learned at the institution, where it was said only that the resignation had been presented last Wednesday, and that it was promptly accepted by the Board of Managers.

When Miss Howard left the hospital at noon on Thursday seven nursery maids who were employed in the hospital under her charge walked out of the institution. Their action was a surprise to the Board of Managers. There were twenty sick infants in the nursery at the time, and the walk-out of the nursery maids left the management shorthanded. Their places were soon filled.

Miss J. E. Donohue, a gradute nurse, has been put in Miss Howard's place.

At the trial of Winifred Ankers the State failed to make out a case against her, and she was acquitted. There is another indictment for murder growing out of the deaths of ten babies at the institution from poison last February, but in view of her recent acquittal it is likely that the second indictment will be dismissed. She is now out on $2,000 bail pending the disposition of the other indictment

Garden Roof Opens To-night.

The dancing pavilion, which is to be a feature of the roof, has been made entirely fireproof. Around the pavilion, which is in the centre of the roof, a grove of bay trees, palms, and flowering plants has been arranged, and the whole is to be lighted with festoons of colored lights.

TO MOVE ITS WARDS INTO COTTAGE HOMES

Exodus from Hebrew Sheltering Guardian Society's Old Quarters Begins To-day.

COTTAGE MOTHERS GO FIRST

They Will Get New Quarters in Westchester County Ready to Receive 1,000 Children.

To-day will mark the beginning of the end of the sojourn of the Hebrew Sheltering Guardian Society in its headquarters of nearly a quarter of a century in this city, and within a week the institution will have been transplanted completely into its new model home of many cottages in Pleasantville, Westchester County. The 1,000 children of the home have been looking forward for many months to the move and planning in advance their communal life in the new quarters in the open country.

This morning the vanguard of the exodus will start from the old home when the twenty cottage mothers who are here after to guide the lives of the children at Pleasantville will leave the city to take up their permanent residence in the new cottages. With them will go four domestic science teachers. The children will follow them on June 24. Meantime the cottage mothers and teachers will be trying out in a practical way the theories of administration they have been studying for many months and adapting their previous methods to the new conditions in the country.

There the institution has been provided with sixteen fine new concrete cottages, three school buildings, including a technical school for boys, and one for girls, a Superintendent's cottage, power house, storage house, laundry building, and infirmary. The whole plant is valued at about $900,000. The grounds have been beautifully laid out and are equipped with all modern improvements, including an ample water supply of more than 250,000 gallons of water a day, and a sewerage system and sewage disposal plant which has been pronounced by experts as one of the most complete of its kind in the State.

Even in its old home the institution was to a very great extent operated and conducted by the children themselves, organized into two remarkably efficient republics, with a complete working system of civic self-government, under the maturer guidance of the Superintendent, Dr. Ludwig Bernstein.

The Boys' and Girls' Republics will continue under the new conditions, and the constitution of each has been so modified as to adapt the rules of the republic to the new environment and necessarily altered methods of living in separate cottages. For many months the entire institution has been in a state of excitement with eagerness to put the new experiment to actual test.

During all those months, too, there has been a careful selection of cottage mothers, consisting in large part of college-bred young women from all parts of the country, and a systematic training of these cottage mothers in the new administrative duties that will be required of them. Each mother will have from thirty to forty children under her care in a cottage.

Only about 500 children will be taken to the new cottages at first, a similar number being kept, as at present, in board in private families in this city until still more housing facilities can be provided in the new home.

The present home of the society is at 150th and 151st Streets and Broadway. Before the erection of the existing building at 150th Street the institution was housed in the old Cyrus Field mansion, which had stood there for more than a century, and which, when remodeled, was made to serve as a northern wing of the home, as it still does. The buildings and site recently have been sold to real estate firms, and the former, it is believed, very shortly will be torn down to make room for large modern apartment buildings.

One of the most liberal contributors to the funds of the institution has been its President, Adolph Lewisohn. Samuel D. Levy is its Vice President, and among those who have been closely affiliated with it are Jacob H. Schiff, Edward Lauterbach, Judge Otto A. Rosalsky, Robert S. Lansburgh, Henry Wollman, and Arthur Sachs.

ARBITRATION BOARD NAMED.

Will Act Upon Differences Between Engineers and Eastern Railroads.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—The board of arbitration to settle the differences between the railroads east of Chicago and their engineers, which a few weeks ago threatened a serious strike, has been appointed by Chief Justice White, Dr. Charles P. Neill, Commissioner of Labor, and Judge Knapp of the Commerce Court.

The board is composed of Oscar Straus, former Secretary of Commerce and Labor; Dr. Albert Shaw, editor of The Aerican Review of Reviews; Otto Eidlitz, former Chairman of the Building Trades Employers' Association of New York; Frederick N. Judson, lawyer of St. Louis; Dr. Charles R. Van Hise, President of the University of Wisconsin; Daniel Willard, President of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, and P. H. Morrissey, former President of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen. Messrs. Willard and Morrissey were named as members of the board by the railroads and engineers, respectively.

The issues affect fifty railroads, including the Pennsylvania and Baltimore & Ohio, east of Chicago and north of the Ohio River. About 25,000 engineers are directly concerned. Had a strike been declared more than 100,000 additional train employes, it is said, would have been indirectly affected.

The parties were brought together through mediation under the Erdman act, which resulted in an agreement to arbitrate. The demands of the men are for a standard wage in the entire eastern territory. The firemen of these systems have presented similar demands, but no action has yet been taken by the companies.

HOME SAVED FOR CRIPPLES.

New Water Supply Insures Future of Blythdale Institution.

A score of young children, all happy at the prospect of getting away from the heat of New York, went to the Blythdale Home for Crippled Children at Hawthorne, Westchester County, yesterday, where they will stay until October or later if they care to. The home is now equipped so that it can stay open throughout the year.

Two years ago the Directors decided to abandon the home because of the scarcity of water there, but Jacob Erlich of this city volunteered his services as an engineer and soon found water enough for all needs, including fire protection. The new supply comes from two artesian wells. Those who support the home include Mr. and Mrs. Isaac N. Seligman, Mrs. Edgar Hellman, Mrs. Jacob Loeb, Mrs. S. Neustadt, Otto S. Kahn, and Paul Warburg.

Water Route to Boston Open To-day.

The all-water route to Boston will open to-day with the sailing of the Bunker Hill from New York and the Massachusetts from Boston for this port. C. H. Taylor, Traffic Manager of the Eastern Steamship Company, said yesterday that the two steamships had been painted white and the saloons moved from the lower to the main decks. Both vessels will burn oil for fuel.

TO PRESERVE GAELIC LORE.

Roosevelt Becomes Honorary Chairman of Literaure Association.

The Gaelic League announced yesterday that the Rev. Michael O'Flanagan, an envoy of the league in this country, had within the last few days received such encouragement in his efforts to arouse in this country a pratical interest in the movement to save old Irish manuscripts from going to waste in museums and libraries that he would stay here a month or so longer to direct the activities of a new organization that has resulted from his mission here. This organization is known as the Gaelic Literature Association, and it replaces the old title of Gaelic Alliance, which, it was thought, did not adequately define the purposes of the movement. Theodore Roosevelt has accepted the post of Honorary President and also is one of the directors of the organization, which will be a practical ally in this country of the international agitatiton to save for posterity the great bulk of Celtic learning hidden away in museums and other places. Col. Roosevelt, the league officers say, is not alone in aiding Father O'Flanagan. Presidents of colleges and universities, scientists, judges, priests, prelates, and men prominent in every walk of life have rallied to the support of the movement by association with the Gaelic Literature Association, they declare.

This list of officers was completed on Saturday and made public yesterday: Honorary President, Theodore Roosevelt; Director, the Rev. Michael O'Flanagan. Advisory Board—Hudson Maxim, Theodore Roosevelt, Martin J. Keogh, the Rev. John C. Cavanaugh, Douglas Hyde, and Edward A. Rumely. Father Cavanaugh is President of Notre Dame University. The first activity of the new organization, it is said, will be the opening of a public campaign in every large city in the country. Within the next ten days headquarters will be opened in upper Broadway or Fifth Avenue, from which scores of men and women will go forth to explain the purposes of the campaign in every section of the city by means of personal visits and conferences. At the headquarters will be competent students of the Celtic literature and exhibits of what the revival has accomplished already.

Among those prominently identified with the movement are John D. Crimmins, Justices Dowling, Giegerich, Goff, Keogh, and Delaney, Col. Louis D. Conley, the Rt. Rev. Mgr. D. J. McMahon, the Rt. Rev. Mgr. W. G. Murphy, the Rt. Rev. Mgr. McKenna, the Rt. Rev. Mgr. McGean, William Michael Byrne, Anthony N. Brady, James Byrne, George J. Gillespie, James B. Regan, Andrew Shipman, the Very Rev. E. G. Fitzgerald, and Dr. Thomas Addis Emmet.

MARRIED BY A BLUNDER.

Greenwich Pair Encountered a Justice, Though Looking for Priest.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., June 9.—Anna Marano and Antonio Calanzo were married by Justice of the Peace Stephen L. Radford yesterday by an error, so they declare, and the Justice cannot untie the knot, although he was urged to do so when the error was discovered.

The bride is 20 and the bridegroom is 21 years old. They applied to Town Clerk Wellstood for a license. The clerk said he gave them one, explaining that they should give it to the priest. He says the bridegroom then asked if he couldn't be married right away. Justice Radford was present, and he obliged them by performing the legal services. Then the couple visited the Rev. Father Ryan at St. Mary's rectory.

They asked to be married, and when Father Ryan inquired for the license they showed him a marriage certificate. The priest accompanied them back to Town Clerk Wellstood, who showed the marriage return of the Justice. The Clerk was asked to issue another license, so they could be remarried by the priest. It was a knotty problem, and he evaded it saying the bride was under age and her parents were not present to give their consent. Justice Radford was willing to return the $2 marriage fee, but he could not untie the marriage knot. The question was next referred to Town Attorney Wright, but he said he could do nothing. The pair were finally told that they were married for keeps, and that, after doing penance as provided by the Church they would be recognized as married by State and Church.

Title to property at 113th Street and Lexington Avenue passed to the hospital authorities within the last few days.

The hospital will be known as the Beth David. It will be eight stories high, built of brick, stone trimmed. The federation has 175 lodges in and near this city and 30,000 members. The speakers were Judge Leonard A. Snitkin, the Rev. J. L. Magnes, Samuel Dorf, Grand Master of the Order of Brith Abraham; Morris Kaufman, and Abraham Rosenberg.

SERANG, PARK ELAND, CURED OF THE BLUES

Snyder Makes the Unhappy Animal Work for His Daily Food.

A PINWHEEL CALMS HIM

Now He Appreciates His Blessings—The Bronx Zoo Has a Subdued Giraffe Now.

When Summer came in Central Park and the many animals that had been kept indoors during the cold weather were turned out into the open, Serang, the solitary eland, developed exceeding discontent. For some reason he did not relish the change from his narrow, almost stall-like inclosure inside the animal house to the larger inclosure without. All day long he would stand looking out with indifference at the zoo crowds, and he showed no desire for food. Head keeper Bill Snyder pondered long over the condition of his charge, and yesterday he confided to his friends that Serang was again in good humor, and he added: "An account of his cure will not be found in the medical journals."

In discussing the health of the eland with Robert Hurton, his assistant, several days ago, Snyder gave it as his opinion that continued prosperity had got on the nerves of the African antelope.

"Things are too easy for that animal," he said. "What he needs is work and something to distract his mind from his troubles. In his native state that animal has to spend most of his time food hunting. Now his food is supplied, and he is absolutely bored to death. A change of scene might help, but work would be more to his liking."

Snyder and his assistant discussed it for some time, and it was Snyder who hit upon the plan which has proved so successful. The eland was moved to a larger corral. There was some grass for him to crop in his leisure moments. When feeding time came the animal leisurely walked over to where the food supply was usually placed. There was no food there. The eland went back and cropped grass for a few minutes, and then back to the food place to investigate. It took four trips before the animal lost his temper, anu then he was mad! It was as though the waiters' strike had spread to the animal house.

Now hungry, the eland started to search for the food. He nosed about, and finally, after a quarter of an hour, found it hidden under an old box and weighted down with stones. Convinced that the food was under the box, Serang backed away and then charged the box, splintering it. Then in no indifferent way he fell to on the fodder.

Serang had to work for every meal he got, and Snyder and Hurton taxed their ingenuity to find hiding places for the animal's meals. The eland lost his indifference, and the food hunt became his real business.

A Pinwheel Cure.

Snyder noticed that while the hunt was on the animal showed improvement, but it was so long between hunts that he grew listless. It was through the natural curiosity of the deer family that Snyder corrected this tendency. He got a large pinwheel of variegated bright paper and stuck it on a post about five feet outside the fence of the inclosure. From the first its whirlings interested the animal. When the wind did not make it go around it was still an object of investigation. In vain did the eland try to push his head through the inclosure rail to get near the pinwheel. When it went around he would become much excited, and his attempts to investigate were redoubled. So hour after hour the eland would watch the strange object.

"It's got him going," Snyder told Hurton.

It had, and he was never able to solve the mystery. His efforts to do so completed the cure, and within ten days the eland, between the food hunt and the investigating of the pinwheel, was so busy that, so Snyder says, he forgot all about his troubles and was actually getting thin at the work.

"Two days ago," Snyder said yesterday, "I figured out that the eland was about the happiest animal in the zoo. Life had interest for him once more, and now I have put him back in the small inclosure outside his Winter home, and he will have a chance now to appreciate prosperity. Animals are much like humans, and the secret of stimulating both is to give them work and an interest in life."

The one exciting incident of the week among the animals in the Zoological Park in the Bronx was furnished on Saturday by the female of the pair of giraffes. The animals are now occupying a corral outside their Winter home. In the inclosure is a big linden tree. The long-necked animals have eaten every leaf off that tree far up as they could reach. This done, they set about scheming to strip the remainder of the linden. It was the male who discovered how it could be done.

"Talk about intelligence!" commented Mr. Ditmars yesterday. "Why, those animals got together and planned to strip that tree with as much intelligence as though they had been human beings."

This is the way they did it: One of them would lie down close to the fence, and the other would stand on hind legs and walk up on the back of the animal on the ground, just as a man would mount up a step. Once up, it would place its forelegs against the top of the inclosure fence and nibble away at the leaves above its head.

A Chastened Giraffe.

When one had eaten for some time it would climb down, lie down under the tree, and the other would climb up and get its share. All went well until Saturday. The tree within reach of the animals, even when using the fence as a stepladder, had been pretty well cleaned. In his eagerness to reach even higher the legs of the male slipped from the fence, and, resting on the cross bar, stuck outside the fence. It would have been all right, but the one on the ground, feeling its companion slip, scrambled to its feet with such promptness that the other could not withdraw his forelegs, and was left dangling with his hind feet within a foot of the ground.

The animal struggled desperately to free himself, and was saved from serious injury by the prompt arrival of a keeper. He pulled a section of tree trunk into the corral and placed it so that the giraffe could rest his hind legs upon it. Then, after ten minutes' work, his front legs were released and he scrambled to his feet a very subdued animal. The keepers report that the pair have abandoned their intention of stripping the linden.

A keeper visiting the roomy inclosure in which are the Mongolian wild horses yesterday morning discovered that during the night a colt had been born. It's a female, and a very fine specimen. It is a light sia color. It was the centre of attraction yesterday for thousands of persons.

LAW HOLDS UP BEST MAN.

Was Standing Court-Martial While Naval Bridal Party Waited.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., June 9.—An incident in connection with the wedding here last night of Miss Lillian Martin of Annapolis and Ensign Thaless Boyd of Clearfield, Penn., which explained the absence of the best man and one of the ushers, came to light to-day. At the time the wedding took place the missing men, Ensigns C. P. Mason and D. E. Barbey, were facing a court of inquiry into a collision between two Government vessels. The hearing was held in a building which had no city telephone connection.

After awaiting at the bride's home until the hour set for the ceremony the bridal party went to the church, hoping to find the missing men there. Failing in this, Ensign Boyd appealed to a classmate to find another best man. Ensign W. H. Burtis was pressed into service. So quietly was this done that only the members of the wedding party and a few of the guests in the congregation knew that any change had been made in the original arrangements.

The court of inquiry was hastily ordered by Capt. J. H. Gibbons, Superintendent of the Naval Academy, to investigate a collision just off the Naval Academy Saturday afternoon between the Argo, commanded by Ensigns Mason and Barbey, and the Robert Center, which was lying at anchor. The damage to the two vessels was only slight, but strict naval regulation demanded an immediate investigation.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 9.—The Yankees and their champion "jinx" made their début here to-day, and dropped an exciting 2 to 1 contest to the White Sox. The visitors played a better fielding game than the home talent and batted just as well, but on several occasions, just as they had everything set for a score, the hoodoo intervened and with its help the Sox succeeded in retiring Wolverton's men without a run. Aside from the untimely appearance of the "jinx" the contest was featured by the excellent pitching of Fisher and Mogridge, the batting of Cree and the all round work of Hal Chase.

The mound men allowed only five hits apiece, no two of which were secured in any one frame. Fisher had the edge on his southpaw rival in the matter of control, but the bad luck which has been following the visitors was too great a handicap for him, and he lost.

Cree was the hitting star, securing three-fifths of his team's bingles—two singles and a double. Chase got a double and made two sensational one-handed stabs of wild throws, one of which saved Hartzell from an error and resulted in a double play. In addition he drew a pass in the ninth and stole second, where he was left stranded when the three following batters failed to connect with the ball.

Callahan slightly revamped his batting order and tried it out on the Yankees. Bodie, who has not been getting many hits of any variety, was dropped from the clean-up position, and Collins was moved up to fill the vacancy.

When Ed Sweeney, the Chicago boy, appeared at the plate for the first time, he found an immense bouquet of American Beauties and a fine traveling bag and a flow of oraetory awaiting him. He acknowledged the gift by popping to Rath.

The first Sox tally came in the fourth when Fisher hit Callahan, and Collins followed with a hard drive to left center, which Zinn fumbled long enough to allow Cal to reach first from first base. The final tally resulted from Weaver's double at the start of the following inning, followed by a couple of infield outs.

Callahan allowed Gardner's drive to get past him at the beginning of the seventh and the second sacker reached the keystone bag on the boot. He moved around to the plate on two infield outs and scored the only run for his side.

These were the only counters manufactured during the afternoon, but in the second Fisher saved the visitors by retiring two batters after Fournier had tripled to right with one out. This was the only time outside of the fourth and fifth periods that the visiting hurler was in danger of being scored on.

But for Gardner's unfortunate bunt in the fifth the visitors undoubtedly would have had another run. Chase opened this frame with a double, and the mishap occurred when Gardner bounded the ball right into Mogridge's hand while trying to advance Hal. A throw to third nipped Chase, and spoiled a great chance of counting. Another bit of Highlander bad luck came in the following round when, with the bases full and two out, Lord knocked down Chase's hard bounder and slid head first into third, forcing Hartzell and retiring the side.

Mogridge's shin prevented the Yanks from counting in the eighth, when Martin's vicious drive was deflected into Weaver's hands, and Buck easily retired Martin at first. Cree followed with a double, which would have scored Martin only for the latter's hoodooed drive. Hal Chase did his best to do things up in the ninth, when he drew a pass and stole second, but Gardner, Daniels, and McConnell, the latter inserted in place of Sweeney, could not locate Mogridge's offerings.

Four Hits for Speaker.

ST. LOUIS, June 9.—Tris Speaker of the Boston Red Sox, the present batting leader of the American League, made a notable record here this afternoon against Pitcher Mitchell of the Browns, getting a single, a double, a triple, and a home run in five times at bat. Both teams hit hard, but the visitors bunched their safeties with better success, and scored an easy victory—9 to 2—thereby strengthening their hold on second place. Laporte was spiked in the third inning, and had to retire from the game, Pratt succeeding him. The score:

Jersey City Pounds Providence Pitchers and Wins, 13 to 8.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 9.—Jersey City fell on the Providence pitchers, sending three to the stable, with the fourth making a poor finish, and won to-day at Rocky Point, 13 to 8. The visitors drove Silne out in the first inning, and Bernier was sent in, fanning Janvrin for the third out, but in the second the visitors got to him so badly that Remneas appeared on the mound in the third. In the fourth he was heavily bombarded, and in the fifth Mitchell started to twirl. The Grays made a great rally and slammed Frill hard in the ninth. The score:

The score was 7 to 0, and the game was replete with exciting situations. Jimmy Dygert was on the mound for the visitors and had two bad innings that made the contest so one-sided, but this did not rob it of some brilliant playing. The score:

New York Times Team Wins Again.

THE NEW YORK TIMES baseball team won their third game of the season yesterday, defeating the Senators, at 214th Street and Broadway, by a score of 12 to 10. Degnon's fielding and base running were a feature, as was the pitching of J. Pancoast, who struck out eight of the Senators' batsmen. The score by innings:

Trying to Boost Up U. S. League.

PITTSBURGH, June 9.—According to information here the United States Baseball League will soon have teams in St. Louis and Baltimore. These, with Pittsburgh, Richmond, Reading, and Chicago, will give the league six cities, with which it is the intention to finish out the season. Otto Steifel, a brewer, has taken over the St. Louis franchise, formerly held by New York, but who in Baltimore has taken up the franchise held at Washington, it has not been learned.

New Jersey Auto Registrations.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., June 9.—The records of the Automobile Department show that there were registered in New Jersey, up to June 1, this year, 39,790 machines, as against 26,878 for the corresponding period last year, when there was no reciprocity in force. Those who oppose reciprocity assert that foreign car owners would not take out yearly licenses as they do now, but depend entirely on the ten-day privilege. The registration this year shows more heavy cars and more extremely light ones among the new machines, showing that the two extremes in up-to-date car building are well patronized.

GIANTS ENTERTAIN AT LONG BRANCH

New York Gets a Big Scare in Game at Hollywood.

Special to The New York Times.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., June 9.—The society of the North Jersey coast looked admiringly upon the New York Giants this afternoon as they cavorted playfully with the Long Branch baseball team on the picturesque horse show grounds at Hollywood. Manager McGraw's National League whirlwinds ran up against a snag in the local team, and a ninth inning rally gave them a terrific scare. The Giants won 11 to 10.

The whole Summer colony turned out to see the game, which has become very popular here. Every box was occupied, and the stands were well filled with spectators, the display of Summer finery reminding one of the popular days of Horse Show week. The Long Branch team includes several young amateur players from Cuba, who display a great knowledge of the game. Henriques, at first base, was the star hitter of the day, making five hits off Louis Drucke, including a terrific triple.

The game teemed with excitement and furnished no end of interest for the crowd. The New Yorks hit the ball hard and executed many fielding plays of unusual brilliancy. It was easily New York's game up to the ninth, when the Long Branch batters pried into Drucke's pitching. He was inclined to be a bit wild in this session, and two passes and two Giant errors added to the gayety of the home players.

When four runs had been scored off Drucke and Long Branch was within one run of the Giants, Coach Wilbert Robinson rushed to the coaching lines and went through an amusing series of acrobatics and contortions in his efforts to prevent Drucke from making a balloon ascension. Smart fielding by the New Yorks behind the erratic pitcher saved the day.

An unusual feature of the game was the début of Eddie Brannick, the Assistant Secretary of the New York Club, as a ball player. He went in as a pinch hitter in place of Murray in the first of the ninth and ripped a stinging single to right field. Later he scored on Wilson's single. Brannick was a bit wabbly in the outfield, for he fumbled Henriquez's single and paved the way for Long Branch's rally. The score:

GIANTS SWAMP HOBOKEN.

Five Pitchers in New York Line-Up, but They Won, 12 to 0.

The spare pitchers of the Giants took a little barnstorming trip over to Hoboken yesterday, and showed that they can play other positions as well as they can pitch. There were five twirlers on the team, Crandall, Wiltse, Tesreau, Robertson, and Shore. The Giants won without half trying by a score of 12 to 0. Sammy Smith, who used to pitch for the New York team of the United States League, was hammered all over the Hoboken flats for sixteen hits, Crandall giving the crowd something to talk about by making four, one of which was a home-run belt over the left-field fence.

The largest crowd that ever saw a ball game in Hoboken attended the festivities, an enthusiastic gathering of 8,500 crowding into the small park to see the fun. Many of the fans were from this city. Big Jeff Tesreau pitched for five innings and gave Hoboken one hit. One man got to third, but no one else even reached first. "Long" Shore, Manager McGraw's new boy wonder from the South, finished the game, and allowed only three hits, one of which was a clean smash. Shore is 6 feet 3½ inches in height, and is so thin he doesn't make a shadow.

Six two-baggers were included in the Giants' artillery practice, and after a while the pitchers who were playing in the field and on the bases just fooled with the Hobokens and didn't take any too much care about getting out. Art Shafer did some glittering fielding stunts and Burns made a fine catch.

The Hoboken players were unable to make their bats and the ball meet, and churned the air a lot in their efforts. In the ninth inning Pound hit Tesreau with the ball, and the burly pitcher fell flat. He was so heavy and tired that it took Umpire Frank McPartlin and three Hoboken players five minutes to lift him to his feet. The score

WHEAT QUOTATIONS IN RAPID CHANGE

But Conflict of Reports from Western Belt Gives Way to Week-End Lethargy.

COARSE GRAINS GO HIGHER

Cotton Crop So Backward That Frost May Be a Big Factor—Alfalfa's First Rich Yield.

WHEAT.

The fluctuations in wheat this week have been irregular and sharp with a quick return to about the preceding level. The fluctuations have been due to the reports regarding the crop promise and yet there has been enough of uncertainty about these reports to prevent any pronounced pressure on either side of the market. The fighting ground has been Kansas and Nebraska with reports of serious deterioration and at the close of the week even conservative authorities were admitting that the high promise in Kansas had been considerably lessened by the high conditions which have prevailed. It was admitted that the absence of rain had resulted in the lowering of the crop condition. Some of the estimates at the close of the week were as low as 50,000,000 bushels for Kansas and 30,000,000 bushels for Nebraska, compared with the maximum of 100,000,000 bushels and 60,000,000 bushels respectively.

A report was issued on Friday by a Western crop expert to the effect that the hard Winter wheat crop would be only 22,000,000 bushels more than last year while the soft Winter wheat crop would be 107,000,000 bushels less, making a net shrinkage of 85,000,000 bushels. With other States the same as last year these figures would make a total Winter wheat promise of 336,000,000 bushels. Snow's report was for a crop of 383,000,000 bushels, but his figures were issued on conditions prevailing before the dry hot weather of the first few days of June. A report by a Western commission house compiled on conditions at the end of the first week in June asserted a serious loss in the hard Winter wheat States with crop possibilities of 357,000,000 bushels. Last year the total Winter wheat crop was 430,000,000 bushels.

Conditions in the American Northwest are very promising indeed. The report of one Western crop expert indicated a present condition of about two points higher than the ten-year average on an increase of about 700,000 acres in the total area with indications pointing to an outturn of 265,000,000 bushels. This estimated outturn, however, is based on the allowance of the average deterioration between now and harvest which has been for about ten years 15 points. This fact must not be forgotten later in the season when the reports of deterioration in Spring begin to come in. The crop can suffer a loss of 15 points, which is the normal loss, and still produce an average crop which would be about 265,000,000 bushels compared with 191,000,000 bushels last year.

The Canadian situation continues promising. There are no complaints, which is pretty conclusive evidence that the outlook is good. The foreign advices are also very satisfactory from Western Europe. The conditions are as good if not better than last year. As usual the Russian reports are mixed and uncertain. The foreign old crop supply situation seems to be a very firm one. While the import requirements have been so far less than last year, the recent demand for the Continent has been quite pressing and foreign houses are disposed to believe that the balance of the old crop year will show no pressure of cash wheat on the European markets excepting temporarily. This condition does not mean that there is likely to be a demand for American wheat, although it may result in a steady inquiry for Manitobas.

The American old crop position is not developing weakness. The persistent and large decreases in the visible supply show rapid domestic distribution. The position is a very interesting one on the question of the balance of the old crop year and the first few weeks of the new. The great shortage in the soft Winter wheat States, which according to the maximum estimates issued the past week is 107,000,000 bushels compared with a year ago, indicates that there will be no surplus of new crop soft wheat for delivery on contract. On the other hand, even if the hard Winter wheat crop is large there is a possibility of demand from Central Western millers and from the Northwest to compete with the contract markets for the first movement of this week. If the crop should turn out disappointing as some of the crop experts are now insisting, the competition would be more acute. New Spring wheat will not be available before September so that the markets may be faced with an absence of cash pressure until new Spring wheat begins to move in volume. This movement is usually in October or early in November. A wet harvest in the Southwest would be an added complication. While the present prospects indicate a good supply of wheat compared with last year and compared with the domestic requirements the wheat is not yet harvested and bears who sell confidently the new crop prospects may find difficulty in making tenders if any complication arises.

The Government report will be out this afternoon at 2:15 and will compare with a condition of 79.7 last month; 80.4 last year, and 80.9 the ten year average. The condition of the Spring wheat will compare with 94.6 last year, and 93.8 for ten years. The area of Spring wheat last year was 20,381,000 acres final. The indicated crop of Winter wheat last month was 370,714,000 bushels; final last year, 430,656,000; final Spring wheat crop last year, 190,682,000 bushels.

OTHER GRAINS.

CORN.—The movement of corn values has been a slow, hardening one. Prices have gained from about 2 to 3 cents a bushel from the low point with the best prices made at the close of the week. The Western receipts were heavy, showing a gain of 3,700,000 bushels compared with the preceding week. This, however, was considered the result of previous sales as the offerings of corn from the country were small and cash houses were looking for a decrease in the movement. While some attention was paid to the weather news most of the reports were favorable and seeding of corn has been completed under satisfactory conditions, and the weather has been so favorable since the latter part of May that considerable of the previous lateness has been made up. The situation in corn continues one, however, in which the contract market shows inclination to get oversold on the weather and on the prospects for the oats and hay crop, but with the small stocks of contract corn and the strength of old corn, prices quickly recovered. The situation is one in which this condition seems likely to prevail until the market is affected later in the season by Summer weather conditions. There will be no Government report on corn until July.

OATS.—The market has also shown a hardening tendency this week with the advance led by the July delivery. This delivery has shown indications of being oversold and easily controlled. New crop deliveries have been inclined to heaviness. A report on the prospects for the oats crop issued during the week showed a condition as of June 1 about 2 points higher than the ten-year average. Allowing for the normal loss between this time and harvest the crop was figured at slightly under 1,100,000,000 bushels. This would be the second largest crop on record. The Government report to-day, the first of the season, will compare with a condition last year of 85.7 and a ten-year average of 88.4. These figures show that the loss last year was during the hot weather later in the season and owing to the lateness of the crop this year there is naturally considerable apprehension of possible damage. The present prospects for hay continue very favorable. The first crop of alfalfa in the Southwest was a big one and well secured. Mill feed has weakened considerably during the week so that the sympathetic effect of the feed stuffs market has been rather against than for values. The demand for cash oats continues rather quiet.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market has been dull and steady. Prices have shown a hardening of tendency with very light trading. The movement of hogs for the week decreased moderately compared with the preceding week. The week's packing returns, however, amounted to a total of 550,000 against 535,000 last year. The Chicago statement of stocks was rather disappointing to believers in better prices, but it had no effect on the contract market. Stocks of pork, lard, and ribs all showed gain, and the aggregate stocks of all meats at Chicago amounted to 164,000,000 pounds, the same as last month, compared with 130,000,000 bushels last year. The world's stock of lard showed small increase. The deduction made was that the prevailing quotations, which are 2 to 2½c. per pound over last year for lard and ribs and about $3 per barrel over last year for pork, are not distributing the product in the way expected, although the actual production of product moving to the smaller movement of hogs is less than last year. The question of the later supplies of live stock seems to be the important question in the market, and there seems to be confidence that supplies will not increase later in the season, although the prospects of lower feed stuff values will make the cost of maturing much less than at present.

COTTONSEED OIL.

Criticism directed mainly toward the dubious character of the buying during the last week is reflected in a diffusion of bearish sentiment. The action of values, however, emphasizes the willingness of a certain group to adhere to the long side of the market, and, while during the week there were periods of liquidation in the July option with other deliveries purchased, the effect of such transactions was merely to bring about a widening of carrying charges rather than a decline in values. The market seems extremely sensitive to speculative operations at this time, and, due to the placid supply and demand situation, the dealings of those not greatly interested in the distribution or absorption of actual oil, are temporarily dominating the situation.

Unquestionably there has been accumulation of contracts by people not desirous of taking in the actual product. At this season of the year there is naturally aversion to storing cottonseed oil, notwithstanding the liberal differences. Refiners, it is believed, can profitably buy July and sell September in the future market, but to date the inclination to do this has not been marked, although it is not improbable that, as an approximate thirty-point difference is established, there may be an increase in such operations. On the other hand, with the expanding of bearish views it is relevant to assume that there has been more opposition given to the advance in the way of speculative short selling.

In the interim demand for oil has not improved materially, and evidently consumers are still relying on their previous heavy purchases. When buying is resumed, the probabilities are that the inquiry will emanate mainly from edible sources. Soapmakers can obtain other products. The inquiry from abroad is also light. The opinion still persists in many quarters that Western lard values continue to be artificially maintained, but it is obvious that the stability of prices there is conducive to an improvement in the compound lard trade rather than otherwise.

Cotton conditions have not afforded much stimulus to either the speculative or consuming trade during the week, the general impression being that the progress of the crop is satisfactory, although not far enough advanced to warrant definite views. The position of crude oil at the South is featureless, while only scattered offerings of old crude, while new crude oil at this early date has not been spoken of significantly. Meanwhile there is the same difference of opinion as to the amount of unsold oil remaining, but with the progression of the season it would not be surprising to note a readjustment in the speculative situation before the early part of July. It may be said that much of pessimism current is based largely on the belief that the technical position of oil is weak rather than the underlying conditions.

COTTON.

Latent steadiness characterized the market of the past week. Moderate upturns occurred, and the course of values at times was not astonishing, in view of the frequent appearance of large trade interests on the buying side. Moreover, the indisposition of the market to respond to depressing news factors conduced to intimidate a scattered short interest, and it was the consensus of opinion that the recovery which took place could be largely ascribed to the market's technical position. The weather over the South was perhaps less suitable as a whole, but far from alarmingly bad, and there was no decided diminution in the volume of favorable crop accounts. Sentiment is well divided, but there seems to be no particular aggressiveness, it being quite apparent that the tendency is to await later information as to the progress of the plant before definite ideas concerning the intrinsic merits of the staple are formed.

The Government document was the principal news feature of the week, but even this interest was not inspiring to the trade one way or the other. The figures of 78.9 submitted proved to be quite in line with expectations, and while some authorities expected a slightly lower disclosure, others slightly higher, it was realized that the significance which could be attached to the Government showing was meagre. The report compared with the high condition of 87.8 last year and a ten-year average of 81.5, so that the start of the crop is undeniably unsatisfactory, but other factors were, and deserved to be, taken into consideration.

The acreage this season will probably be under that of last by from 5 to 10 per cent, and the preparation of the crop has fallen far below that of last season in nearly all respects. Part of the unfavorable start has undoubtedly been remedied with the highly favorable weather in many sections of the belt since May 25, or the average date of the replies to the Government, but over large areas the plant is so late that the question of the frost date entering into the situation will be regarded as more vital than for several seasons. On the other hand, there has been an ample subsoil moisture which, in connection with the liberal use of fertilizer during the preceding year, is a partial offsetting factor, while the trade realizes that the crop can easily be 10 per cent under that of this last season and prove adequate, following an outturn which served to permit of general replenishing.

There was generous precipitation over much of the central west and the east during the past week which was regarded as beneficial in the main. In fact, mild complaints of dry weather in some of the important producing states of the east were converted to claims of excessive precipitation again, but even allowing for the uneven distribution of the moisture there are many of the belief that unless the rainfall is incessant for several days, the deterioration on that account will be trifling. Moreover, at the close of the week the indications favored fair weather in sections where there had been abundant moisture. Several crop experts have noted rapid planting in the flooded sections with such work about completed while there has been no change in the tenor of the generality of advices pertaining to the satisfactory stands which have been obtained.

Summed up, conservative interests express the opinion that if the drought complaining regions of Oklahoma and Texas should be visited within the next week by ample rains, the crop situation will be all that can be desired. There is already talk of a rather bearish July Government report as far as the percentage condition is concerned, but there will be a great deal of interest evinced in the acreage statistics. A reduction in the area of over 8 per cent would be larger than what many have anticipated and incidentally it has been asserted that where there will be curtailment it has been brought about largely by necessity rather than voluntarily, the assumption being that prevailing levels of cotton are not altogether displeasing to cotton growers.

An Ideal Method of Saving

SAFE FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS, yielding 5 to 6 per cent., when obtainable in denominations of $100 and exchangeable into $1,000 bonds, constitute, in our judgment, an ideal way of saving money for people of moderate means.

For example: We offer at a price to yield 6%, First Mortgage Bonds of a steam railroad issued at the low rate of $10,000 per mile. These bonds are in $100 pieces, and when ten are accumulated may be converted into $1,000 bonds. Meanwhile purchasers receive a return at least 50 per cent. higher than paid by most savings banks.

We have sold Bonds of this issue to conservative investors.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION

If one were to exclude from a survey of the present situation the factor of politics the showing would be almost entirely a most favorable one. What we would find would be a record of expanding trade with foreign countries; record production and consumption at home of iron and steel products and of copper; a general volume of trade which seems to be turning again toward expansion after some recent signs of check which latest data do not bear out; a condition of ease in the money market, and a promising outlook for the season's crops. Granting all this, it would be difficult to attribute to other factors a sufficient influence upon the general situation to vitiate a prediction of increasing prosperity. Without lessening the importance which really ought to be attached to certain phases of the present political situation, it is altogether possible to assume that the underlying factors above referred to will, indeed, be powerful enough to override other considerations, and those who are taking this view can hardly be charged with showing too great optimism if due reserve be made for such temporary unsettling influence as politics may yet play before the outcome of the present campaign is fully determined, and for the further possibility of disappointment in respect to the season's crops. The stock market itself last week displayed for a time a very cheerful tone, but, as on several recent occasions, it rather quickly dropped back into dullness, along with which came an irregular if, indeed, not a reactionary tendency.

Looking at other developments of the last week, there can be only satisfaction drawn from such information as that which came to hand of the steel trade and the copper trade, two of the most important of the country's industries. What recent events in the steel trade have demonstrated is that the advance in the price of many steel products has not put a check upon consumption, but, on the contrary, that new orders have continued to come to hand in sufficient volume to more than make up for the record output of the steel mills. To-day's statement of the Steel Corporation is expected to show a substantial increase in unfilled orders, and if this is borne out it will be made very plain that the users of iron and steel are filling their wants at a rate which has never previously been attained. So far as the position of the copper trade is concerned, it was pretty clearly indicated in last week's statement of the copper producers, showing a decrease of over 15,000,000 pounds during May in the stocks of the metal in the hands of producers. At the same time the price of the metal rose to 17½ cents, owing to the urgency of buying on the part of consumers who had failed to provide for their wants at lower prices. The opinion in the copper trade is that nothing appears on the horizon which seems capable of bringing a check to the advance in the price of the metal, but reverses in the position of the copper market have occurred often enough in the past to make many consumers of the metal hesitate to do more at the present level than to fill their immediate wants. It must be acknowledged, however, that this same sort of attitude on the part of important buyers of copper for use in manufacturing accounts for their failure to lay in a store of the metal at several cents a pound under the prevailing quotation. We are looking here at the steel and copper trades not so much from the point of view of those directly concerned with them as for the light which the conditions in these trades may throw on the general business situation. Both trades have been regarded as among the best barometers of general business conditions, and if we accept them as such the outlook is indeed gratifying.

No period, however propitious, can be expected to be entirely free from complaint regarding the conditions affecting the crops in one section of the country or another, but the drift of all of last week's advices favor adherence to the view that the crops as a whole have made most favorable progress. Last week's first Government cotton report of the season showed a condition 2.6 points under the ten-year average for this date, but no acreage figures were supplied, and even the condition report was deprived of much of its importance by reason of the fact that the weather has been very favorable since the date as of which this report was made up, and by the further fact that the planting of cotton this year was delayed by the lateness of the season. It will not, therefore, be possible until the July report is issued to form any definite opinion on the basis of the Government's figures of the outlook for the cotton crop. It is noteworthy that in the trade reviews of the commercial agencies for the last week the increasing confidence in the favorable outcome of the year's farming is finding reflection in increased final distribution of merchandise. Bank clearings last week instead of following the tendency displayed the previous week, showed good increases over the corresponding week of last year and the year before.

The sale of the State's bonds at a very small fraction over par served as a reminder last week of the tendencies which have been manifesting themselves in the investment market. It has persistently been indicated for a long time past that there are fewer and fewer individual investors able or willing to content themselves with low interest bearing bonds, and this has its reflection even in the market for a security which commends itself almost exclusively to financial and fiduciary institutions. So generally is this condition recognized that no surprise is caused by the fact that these State bonds brought so small a premium, but there are other conditions which bear on the situation, including the increasing freedom with which Governments as well as individuals have committed themselves to enlarged expenditures, and here is one of the conditions which touches vitally upon the general situation. The country and its people are spending too much of their incomes and there is too little left for reinvestment. In many cases this course is practically forced upon individuals, but the result, so far as the element of saving is concerned, is the same.

One influence which helped to contract trading in the stock market toward the end of the week was the expectation of the handing down of important decisions by the Supreme Court at its session on Friday and again to-day. Neither the anthracite coal case nor the Union Pacific case was decided on Friday, but on that day the court rendered its decisions in four appeals from the Commerce Court, reversing that court in each instance. Had it not been for the attitude which Congress has already taken toward this newly instituted court, its reversal in all the cases which have come before the Supreme Court from the Commerce Court might have been the occasion of disappointment to the railroads, which had looked kindly upon the establishment of this tribunal. It is worthy of note, however, that the reversals by the Supreme Court were in several instances favorable to the railroads.

THE MARKETS OF EUROPE

MONEY CHEAP IN LONDON.

Revival of Market Predicted, Following Week of Depression.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, June 9.—Throughout the week the general tone of the stock market was depressed. The losses incurred by liquidations during the last settlement prevented any marked improvement.

The only firm feature was the copper shares, the strength of which and good crop news exercized a beneficial effect on Americans.

The prospects for the coming week are hopeful. A revival of the market is confidently predicted. The Board of Trade returns for May established new records, especially as regards exports, foreshadowing a continuance of favorable foreign exchanges.

Money is relatively cheap and likely to remain so, although the margin of supplies is not very largely in excess of current needs. The money market liquidated all short loans to bank, but is still heavily in debt.

The conditions in Germany and elsewhere point to severe pressure at the end of the half year.

COPPERS STRONG IN PARIS.

Rio Tinto Shares Experience Sharp Rise, Owing to Better Prices.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, June 9.—The salient feature of the week's Bourse was the sharp rise in Rios, the continued strength of the copper group being stimulated by the good impression produced by the copper statistics just published, showing a decrease in the European stock of 2,952 tons.

This, combined with the rise in the price of the metal, both in London and New York, gave new stimulus to operators, resulting in a good increase in business.

The news from Fez of the submission of the tribes, and the report that Franco-Spanish negotiations are about to terminate in an agreement, were other factors encouraging an optimistic spirit.

The market closed somewhat irregular, but indications point to renewed activity.

BOERSE IMPROVES.

American Factors Contribute to Remove Earlier Depression.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

BERLIN, June 9.—The Boerse at the beginning of the week was dull and depressed, rumors that several firms connected with the stock markets were insolvent and the unsatisfactory position of the money market restricting operations.

By the end of the week, however, the tone improved, mainly on account of support from New York, good American steel advices, and the strong recovery of Canadian Pacifics on Saturday, when it was stated that the stock offered here was taken by New York. The favorable German crop report and the fresh record of German iron production last month were other factors helping the improvement.

Imperial State loans were weak. Three per cents, touched 80.375 on Thursday, the lowest quotation yet registered.

Prospects of the early reduction of the Reichsbank rate were discussed with optimism. It is reported that the managers are disposed to make a reduction of ½ per cent., provided that the next return is favorable, but recent remarks of the President of the Havenstein render an immediate reduction improbable, although it is known that he is anxious to lower the rate as soon as possible.

NO ADVANCE COMING IN STEEL PRICES

Denials in Pittsburgh District That List Is to be Put Up at Once.

DEMAND FOR BARS GOOD

Automobile Makers and Railroads Both In the Market for Heavy Supplies Now.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, June 9.—The word went out yesterday, in response to inquiries following the recent advance in merchant pipe, that no further advances in finished steel product were to be expected for some time. The advance early last week of $2 a ton on the smaller sizes of merchant pipe (all sizes under six-inch) started reports that producers were preparing to put shapes and plates up another dollar a ton, to $26. The understanding has been recently that no further advance in plates and shapes past the present $24 level, reached at the opening of May, would be made until about the opening of July, but a number of small tonnages last week were sold by mills at the higher figure, and rumors started of a decision for an immediate advance in the official price.

From the best sources yesterday this report was denied. It was said that no action in the way of changing finished product prices would be attempted, at least until after the coming National political conventions. Although the steel trade is inclined to discount all political agitation this year, on the theory that the country intends to buy steel, no matter who wins Presidenial honors, the leaders are not ignoring the possibility that developments in the National conventions and in platform making may have their bearing on the spot market for finished product.

Despite the fact that the country attained, with the opening of this month, the heaviest daily tonnage rate in finished steel in the history of the industry, the mills continue to maintain a conservative position as regards prices. Outputs are well contracted ahead, the heavier lines being sold into the third quarter for practically the maximum capacity of the plants now operating. Specifying on running contracts for June deliveries is exceeding expectations, and a threat of new price levels seems unnecessary. The advance in steel pipe at the opening of last week had been anticipated for a fortnight, the new prices bringing butt and lap-weld pipe of smaller sizes on a line with seamless tubing and other tubular products. The conservatism of the mills is illustrated in the fact that the heavier sizes of merchant pipe, on which heavy inquiries are still pending from the Southwest, were not touched.

While the Chicago district is selling merchant bars for spot delivery at premiums of about $1 a ton above the official base price, limited tonnages of standard bars remain available in Pittsburgh at the base rate of 1.20c., established May 1, which is $24 a ton. Demand by automobile interests for supplies in excess of their second quarter contracts has created a lively demand for bars, and the railroads also are specifying more heavily for bar iron than at any time this year.

The week just ended saw an advance in cold rolled shafting of about two points on the official list, although this still leaves shafting at an abnormally low figure, fully ten points off the high point of 1909, though $4 or more above the low point of last February, the lowest on record. Specialties that have shown slight advances in the last fortnight include bolts and nuts, and structural rivets, which latter had not advanced in line with other structural and building supplies.

Makers of pig iron are not worried over the continued failure of the crude metal to take its share in profits of the rising market in steel. Pig iron continues within about $1 of the low point of last Winter, and sales last week in Pittsburgh, Mahoning, and Shenango Valley territory were limited and displayed no signs of price betterment. A sale of 4,000 tons of forge iron by a Valley furnace interest actually showed a decrease of 10 cents a ton for that grade—$12.90, Valley furnace, as compared with the last preceding sale at $13, furnace. Basic iron for third quarter continued to be quoted at $13.25, Valley furnace, but no actual transactions have been reported at that price in ten days. Bessemer iron remains pegged at $14.25, Valleys, with little new demand, although current shipments on contract are very heavy. The only real interest shown in the market is in foundry grades, in which there is lively inquiry for third quarter and last half, and a very definite prospect of a price advance from $13.25, Valley furnace, the present definitely established market.

The secret of the situation is found in the exhaustion of pig iron stocks in Pittsburgh and Valleys district at the rate of fully 40,000 tons a month. Stocks of iron in this territory, including the reserves held by steel works, are the lowest since 1909. In the present situation, a pig iron shortage by the middle of the year seems unavoidable, in which case the shipment of iron into the district from outside is certain to bring prices up with a jump.

A report, seemingly well verified, that the Steel Corporation will take some tonnage of spot basic out of the open market in Chicago district the coming week, to supply its Gary mills, which are short of pig iron, has raised speculation here, since it is known that recent heavy purchases of basic iron in Chicago district, to supply Southern Illinois and St. Louis interests, have about exhausted all stocks of basic in Chicago. The Steel Corporation may find it easier to buy its basic in the Mahoning Valley or Cleveland district, it is believed.

The Connellsville coke market, which has been the victim of manipulation since the first signs of a coke shortage developed, has not yet found itself, and prices of furnace and foundry coke declined rapidly all week, spot furnace coke selling at $2.20 at oven Saturday, as against $2.40 a week ago. Some furnace coke was taken on contract for second quarter at $2.15, although open quotations remained around $2.30 to $2.40. Sales of standard foundry coke for last half have been made at $2.50, which is 20 cents under the middle-of-May level.

THE WEEK'S IMPORTS.

Customs Statistics Show a Large Gain Over 1911.

Statistics covering imports, exclusive of specie, entered at the Port of New York in the week ended June 1, as compiled by the Custom House, show the value of general merchandise entered to have been $16,338,660, a gain of $5,088,427, compared with similar imports of the corresponding period in 1911. Dry goods imports for the week aggregated $1,910,208, a decrease of $21,898, compared with the same week last year. The total value of the week's imports was $18,248,868, against $13,182,339 in 1911, a gain of $5,066,529.

The total value of imported merhandise entered since the beginning of the current year aggregates $435,483,802, an excess of $62,772,437 over the value of merchandise entered in the corresponding period in 1911. The imports of 1911 to the above date amounted to $372,711,365.

CANADA CUTS CEMENT DUTY.

Must Import It, Owing to Boom in Building Trade.

Special to The New York Times.

OTTAWA, Ontario, June 9.—The Canadian Government has decided to grant for a limited period a remission of one-half of the duty paid on Portland cement or hydraulic, or water lime in barrels, bags, or casks, and upon the bags and casks in which they are imported. The remission will apply to the period from June 12 to Oct. 31.

Heretofore the general duty has been 52 cents per barrel of 350 pounds. It will be now 26 cents on importations from the United States, and 17 cents on those from Great Britain. This action has been taken because of building construction in the West being held up for lack of a cement supply. Of 6,250,000 barrels used last year 441,000 came from the United States.

SECURITY HOLDERS WARNED

That It's Better to Pay the New State Tax Than Await Local Assessments.

The effort of the State Board of Tax Commissioners to have all assessors throughout the State enforce the tax on "secured debts," as provided by Chapter 802 of the Laws of 1911, has caused the Merchants' Association of New York in a circular letter to warn all persons holding taxable bonds, who have hitherto considered themselves immune, that they can no longer offset their debts against bonds taxable under the "secured debt" law. The circular further shows that compliance with the law materially reduces the burden of personal taxation on certain forms of personal property, while the failure to comply results in an increase in the net amount upon which the tax is levied, and causes the annual continuance of the tax.

The securities affected are mortgages on real estate outside the State, not recorded in the State; serial bonds or notes, secured by mortgage or deed, recorded outside the State and not recorded in the State; serial bonds or notes secured by the deposit of collateral securities, under deed of trust or trust agreement, and serial bonds, debentures, or notes, not payable within one year, for an amount not more than $1,000 each, and not secured by any collateral security.

A single payment of one-half of 1 per cent. tax upon the face value of such securities exempts them from all further taxation in the State, or divisions thereof, but if the tax is not paid, the securities are subject to annual local assessment, with no deduction being allowed for debts owing by the holder. In other words, holders of securities, discovered by the assessors, will be compelled to pay, without any exemption for debts, an annual tax, usually from a third to a half of the income, and very much greater than the lower tax, which, once paid, insures complete exemption for the future.

MEAT PACKING LEADS ALL OUR INDUSTRIES

Value of Products of All Kinds Estimated at $1,370,568,101 by Census Bureau.

ILLINOIS TAKES FIRST RANK

Kansas Is Second and New York Third—Total Number Employed in the Industry 108,716.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 9.—Thirteenth Census statistics, showing the number of establishments, persons engaged, power, capital, expenses, and product of the slaughtering and meat-packing industry in continental United States, by States, are given in an advance bulletin which will be issued by Director Durand of the Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce and Labor. It was prepared under the supervision of William M. Steuart, Chief Statistician for Manufactures.

The industry considered here was in value of products the first in rank in the census year. It includes the wholesale slaughtering and meat-packing establishments and those engaged in the manufacture of sausage, but not the numerous retail butchers' shops, which in the aggregate slaughter a large number of animals. It includes also the manufacture of many by-products, some of which are carried to a high degree of elaboration.

In 1909 there were in the United States 1,641 establishments; 108,716 persons engaged in the industry, of which number 1,650 were proprietors and firm members, 1,855 were salaried officers, Superintendents, and managers; 13,794 were male and 1,680 female clerks. The average number of wage earners was 89,728; the number in the maximum month, December, was 96,234, and in the minimum month, April, 84,558.

The capital invested amounted to $383,249,170. The expenses were $1,316,366,878, of which the officials received $4,915,328, clerks $15,138,161, wage earners $51,644,720, fuel and rent of power $6,700,834, other materials $1,195,126,950, rent of factory or works $1,218,596, taxes (including internal revenue) $2,026,345, contract work $414,895, and other miscellaneous $39,180,581. The primary horse power was 208,707; the value of products, $1,370,568,101. The value added by manufacture, which is the difference between cost of materials and value of products, was $108,740,317.

Illinois, with an average number of 26,705 wage earners, with $45,618,899 in value added by manufacture and $389,594,956 in value of products, or about 30, 27, and 28 per cent., respectively, of the general total for each item, was far ahead of the next State in rank. This latter was Kansas, with an average number of 10,951 wage earners, $17,714,526 in value added by manufacture and $165,360,516 in value of products. New York ranked third, with 6,110 wage earners, $16,961,817 added by manufacture, and $127,130,051 in value of products.

The following is a condensed summary:

Hog 100 Days Without Food.

Special to The New York Times.

MOBILE, Ala., June 9.—Pinned under the ruins of a church near Evergreen, Ala., which had blown down on Feb. 21, a hog was found to-day alive, and while weakened from the long imprisonment, was able to eat and drink. The animal was more than 100 days without food and water. Several persons were present when the débris of the building was removed and the gaunt hog came forth.

MANY PRICES UNSETTLED.

Dun's List for the Week Shows Change in 56 Commodities.

Dun's list of wholesale prices quoted in the New York and near-by markets last week shows a considerable variation from quotations of the previous week. No less than fifty-six commodities show a change in price, thirty-three having advanced and twenty-three declined. Ten of the advances had direct bearing on foodstuffs, while twelve directly or indirectly affected the cost of wearing apparel. Drugs, chemicals, and oils supplied six more advances, and the balance was pretty evenly divided between the metal, hide, and tobacco markets. Being confined for the most part to limited fields, neither the advances nor the declines can be taken as a general criterion of current business conditions. Ten of the declines noted were in quotations on foodstuffs. The grain market slumped badly, showing lower prices on six of the eight commodies quoted. The remaining seven declines were distributed among three or four miscellaneous markets.

Summing up the week briefly, the grain market showed the greatest loss of strength, and the wool and woolen goods market the greatest gain. Drugs, chemicals, and oils were firmly held, six advances and one decline being shown. Advances and declines in the metal and foodstuff markets were evenly balanced. Hide and leather values were well maintained. Lumber, building materials, paper, and boots and shoes showed no recession from values of the previous week. Of the declining commodities, all but six were quoted at prices somewhat higher than those of a year ago. Of the thirty-three advances, only five show a decrease from prices current in 1911.

The changes, with comparative prices last year, follow:

A PLEA TO ARMY WOMEN.

Mrs. Wood Raising a Fund for a Memorial to Titanic Heroes.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Mrs. Leonard Wood, wife of the Chief of Staff of the Army, has perfected a plan for obtaining the support of the army women for the movement to raise a women's memorial in Washington to the men who died for women on the Titanic. Mrs. Wood has undertaken to have a personal letter sent to every woman in every army post in the country, asking for contributions. It is the plan to put all the money thus received into one large sum and contribute it to the memorial fund as coming from the women of the United States Army.

The co-operation of the navy women has been sought in another manner. Mrs. John Hays Hammond has written to the wives of the principal officers and commanders of all the fleets and navy yards asking their aid.

POLICE TO STOP USE OF AUTOS BY GANGS

Aldermen Asked to Pass an Ordinance Compelling Garage Men to Keep Records.

CAN TRACE THEM IN THIS WAY

Dowling Will Introduce Measure at Next Meeting of the Board—More Gang Men Held.

The use of the automobile in the commission of crime has furnished the police officials with a problem which calls for immediate solution. It is a difficult enough problem when the automobile is used by thieves as a means of "get away" after a robbery, but the adoption of the high-powered car for the transportation of gangsters to the scene of assault and battle and for the dropping of dynamite bombs in front of the business places of their enemies has set Commissioner Waldo, Second Deputy Commissioner Dougherty, and Inspector Hughes planning to overcome this latest method of affording safety for those of the underworld.

A step toward the solution of this problem will be made, it was said by a police official yesterday, in an ordinance which the Board of Aldermen will be asked to adopt. Alderman Dowling will introduce this measure at the next meeting of the board. It is intended to compel garage owners to keep a "log book" giving the time of a car leaving the garage and the time of its return; the number of the car, the name and address of the chauffeur, his license number, and the name of the man hiring the automobile. With such a record the police believe that the thieves and gangsters who use automobiles will be at their mercy, providing a penalty severe enough to make it unprofitable to falsify the record is imposed.

The method by which gangsters have been obtaining the use of automobiles was explained by an officer of the Police Department to a TIMES reporter. There are certain garages, some of them already under police suspicion, where a car can be obtained and no questions asked. In the various gangs whose activity has engaged the police attention during the last week, are men who are qualified to operate automobiles. If there were not there are enough men now running cars in this city with police records to undertake any "difficult" task for them. The gang members go to a garage where they are known and ask for an automobile without a chauffeur.

False Number Cards Used.

"With one of their own men at the wheel it is an easy matter to turn any trick and get away without capture," said a Lieutenant of police yesterday. "The men usually have with them, or pick up along the route, one of their companions who has a fictitious number card. They remove the number of the car and substitute the number they have had made. Sometimes, however, even this is not necessary, for in my opinion there are garage men who would allow the substitution of numbers to be made before the car leaves the place.

"With a wrong number hanging conspicuously from the rear, the automobile, with a party apparently on pleasure bent, speeds to the scene of action, and then, when the trick is turned, it speeds away again and the policeman has no chance either of overtaking it or identifying it through its number. Once having outdistanced possible pursuit, the car stops, the wrong number is taken off and the right one put on. The man with the number usually leaves the car, so that, in case of coming under suspicion and a search, there will be no wrong number to seize as evidence.

"This is what the police have to meet, and the remedy must lie in the direction of a detailed record of every car in every garage in the city, and it is now proposed that such a record be kept."

It was in an automobile that some of the gangsters went forth last week to plant dynamite bombs. They exploded three in one neighborhood, all within a few minutes. The fronts of three houses were damaged. Before the police arrived the bomb planters were far away from the scene.

When "Big Jack" Zelig was wounded as he was leaving the Criminal Court Building there was an automobile waiting near, ready to take the Sirocco gun fighters to safety. Three Italians got out of an automobile in Morris Avenue, the Bronx, ten days ago. The trio trailed another Italian, with the car following close to the curb. When the opportunity presented itself, one of the men took out a revolver and coolly fired three shots into the man ahead, killing him. Then the assassin and his companions got into the car, and it carried them away to safety. They were out of sight before the dead man's companion could get the number of their car.

Auto Used by Burglars.

Several weeks ago a crook hired a taxicab in front of a well-known restaurant. He had the driver go to a loft building near Twenty-second Street and Broadway to pick up two "traveling men." When the men were safe in the cab the driver was forced to drive to a quiet place in Brooklyn, where his fares got into a waiting automobile and left him to whistle for his fare. Police investigation showed the thieves practically had cleaned out a furrier's establishment. A taxicab figured in the escape of the men who robbed a bank messenger of $23,000 below the "dead line" a few months ago.

The automobile first figured in gang hostilities a little more than a year ago, when a downtown gang went uptown and cleaned up an enemy's stronghold in Second Avenue. Since then the automobile has been growing in favor with gun men.

Four men arrested on Saturday night by the Strong-Arm Squad in a saloon at 165 Bowery were held by Magistrate Kernochan, in the Tombs Court yesterday morning, in $1,500 bail each. They are charged with having had deadly drugs in their possession. They gave their names as Edward Dunn of 119 Ninth Avenue, Stephen Davis of 338 Third Street, Jersey City; William Vito of 12 Eighth Street, Secaucus, N. J., and Robert Wright of 534 West Fiftieth Street. The detectives charge in their complaint that the defendants had a quantity of cocaine in their possession in bottles and in boxes, some of the drug being labeled. The liquid and powders found in the possession of the men will be analyzed.

As a result of a search of some of those who attended a union meeting at Fifty-fourth Street and Third Avenue on Saturday night, Lawrence McGuire, a stationary engineer of 764 Third Avenue, was taken before Magistrate Krotel yesterday, in the Yorkville Court, and charged with carrying a concealed weapon. The weapon was a length of rubber tubing, in each end of which was a lump of lead. McGuire was held without bail. He said some one must have put the weapon in his pocket, and he did not know it was there until a detective discovered it.

20,000 HELD IN BRIDGE BLOCK

Train Jumps Track, Passengers Are Shaken Up, Some Faint.

More than 5,000 persons in six elevated trains were kept on Williamsburg Bridge for an hour between 3 and 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and about 15,000 more were delayed by the block when a six-car train of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit jumped the track at the Manhattan end of the bridge and crashed into a "sand cushion." Many of the passengers were badly shaken up and bruised, others became hysterical, and several fainted.

The accident happened in the Rockaway Beach rush hour, when thousands were seeking sea breezes, and the platforms were jammed with people, many of whom added their cries to those of the imprisoned passengers. A hurry call was sent to the feserves of the Clinton Street Station, and, headed by Sergt. Quinn, the policemen were soon battling their way to the platforms. Their presence awed the rowdies, who took advantage of the occasion to add to the trouble by shrieking at the top of their lungs such howls as would make the women believe that many were seriously injured. A few were roughly handled by the police, but no arrests were made.

Train Dispatcher Lovell and Inspector Delaney notified the Brooklyn headquarters of the company, and a wrecking train was rushed to the scene. It was found necessary to remove the current from the third rail, and consequently those trains already on the bridge could not move backward to discharge their passengers until after the wrecking train had arrived by way of the Brooklyn-bound tracks and had succeeded in getting the train on the tracks.

Many passengers who had paid their fares got transfers and were bustled into surface cars and again retransferred into trains at the Brooklyn side of the bridge, where traffic had been resumed.

THEATRE MAN ASKS MERCY.

Tells Churchmen He Faces Great Loss if a Permit Is Refused.

The clash between church and school interests and the proprietor of a moving picture theatre nearing completion in Forty-second Street, east of Third Avenue, reached a point yesterday where the proprietor of the theatre asked his opponents to relax their opposition before the License Bureau protesting against granting a permit for his place.

The proprietor of the moving picture house based his request on the loss he would suffer if the permit was refused. He addressed his appeal directly to the Rev. Mr. Holland, one of the clergymen attached to St. Bartholomew's Church, which maintains a parish house directly opposite Public School 27, which adjoins the proposed theatre. Some 3,800 girls and boys attend these institutions.

"I have built a fire-proof theatre, with lights to burn all the time, and no dark corners," Sigman Moses, proprietor of the place, declared.

"But our objection isn't to the kind of theatre you have built or the kind of plays you will give," the Rev. Mr. Holland told him. "We have established here a little oasis for children through which the great stream of city traffic does not flow. Schools on two sides of the street eliminate business from two-thirds of the block. If we should allow your theatre to open, these children would be brought in contact with many undesirable characters."

The officers of St. Bartholomew's parish house have received the support of a Catholic church further east in Forty-second Street, and the pastor of a Presbyterian church just north of Forty-second Street, in Second Avenue, in the fight to prevent the issuance of a permit to the motion picture theatre.

ALARM FOR MISSING WOMAN.

Relatives Seek Mrs. Hannah Rosenberg, Who Disappeared Friday.

After searching since Friday for Mrs. Hannah Rosenberg, 56 years old, the wife of Charles S. Rosenberg, a cigar manufacturer at 2,350 Third Avenue, her relatives appealed yesterday to the newspapers to aid in finding the missing woman. A confidential alarm was sent out by the police of the West 125th Street Station on Friday evening, but the relatives asked the police yesterday to send out a general alarm and give the matter as much publicity as they could.

At the time she disappeared from the home of her sister, Mrs. A. Fuchs of 1,610 Amsterdam Avenue, Mrs. Rosenberg left a short note, written in German, which, according to Morris Gintzler of 605 West 141st Street, a relative by marriage, intimated that she intended to commit suicide. The note stated, Gintzler said, that the writer was sorry to take the step she intended to take, but that she had been driven to it by her troubles.

Gintzler said Mrs. Rosenberg and her husband have been separated for some time, and that this weighed on her mind. She has a son, Louis C. Gintzler, who is in the advertising business, and who is aiding in the search for his mother.

Mrs. Rosenberg is about 5 feet 4 inches in height. She has curly brown hair, blue eyes, red birthmarks on her face, and a wart on her nose near her right eye. She wore a black coat and skirt, a white waist, a black and white silk petticoat, black shoes, white stockings, and a black hat on which was a blue velvet bow. She carried a black velvet handbag in which was about $15.

ELDER SISTER ASKS GIRL'S DEPORTATION

Sets Detectives to Watch Husband and Nursemaid and Has the Man Jailed.

FRIENDS AID YOUNG WOMAN

Deny All the Charges of Her Jealous Sister and Appeal to Immigration Authorities.

The immigration authorities at Ellis Island have been asked to deport on the ground of immorality Agnes Taylor, an 18-year-old Irish girl, whose record of eighteen months in this city is one of industry and patience under much suffering. The charge is brought by the girl's sister, Mrs. Jane Anne McCloy of 506 West Fifty-first Street, who brings in the name of her own husband, Roby McCloy.

On Wednesday, the immigration officers went to the home of Mrs. Francis McMurray, at 40a West Fifty-fifth Street, and took Agnes to Ellis Island. She is held there a prisoner now, and the authorities have promised to pass on her case within the next few days. They advised Mrs. McMurray, who is the nearest friend that Agnes has in this city, to get a lawyer to present the girl's case and try to show wherein the sister's charges were unfounded.

Mrs. McMurray, whose husband is a cook on a Clyde liner, had no money to employ counsel, and she went to the Legal Aid Society. When the Legal Aid Society people heard that it was a case involving scandal affecting two sisters they refused to take it up. The British Consul in this city was then visited by Mrs. McMurray, and her evidence as to the girl's good record was taken and will be presented to the authorities.

Agnes Taylor had been working as a nursegirl from Jan. 27 until two weeks ago. She accompanied the family which employed her to Boston, and returned to find that her sister had sworn out a warrant for her arrest, charging her with improper conduct with her husband. The husband had in the meantime been brought into court by the angry wife and sentenced to a term on Blackwell's island for striking her. The charges against Agnes were presented to Judge Appleton, in the West Fifty-fourth Street Court, and he discharged the girl.

The sister was far from content with this settlement. She went to the Ellis Island authorities and lodged a complaint. Agnes and Mrs. McMurray pleaded with Mrs. McCloy not to bring the charge and tried to make her appreciate the disgrace that would follow the return of the young sister to Ireland under such a stigma. Denials and protestations of innocence had long since ceased to have any effect on the sister.

How the married sister got the evidence on which Agnes is now held at Ellis Island was explained yesterday. Private detectives came to the humble home at 405 West Fifty-fifth Street and watched and waited. Mrs. McMurray's front room was at that time occupied by a young married couple, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Walters. On a night when they went out for a walk and sat for a while in the Park before returning home they were followed by a man, whom they noticed but did not address. They came to their home about 10 o'clock and retired. Then a report went to the angry and jealous sister which said that a man answering the description of the husband and a woman answering the description of the sister walked out into the Park and then came back together to the sister's home. On that night Agnes was not even at home, but was with the family which employed her as a nursegirl.

Jane Anne McCloy is a small woman with fire in her brown eyes that is at first terrifying. She took her sister in to live with her eighteen months ago, and after a short time she turned her out. She followed her to Mrs. McMurray's with her suspicions. Mr. and Mrs. Walters, who had the front room at Mrs. McMurray's, were obliged to move because of the constant prying of private detectives, men and women, who always managed to take the husband and wife for a supposedly guilty couple. With her husband in jail and her sister put out of the way, Mrs. McCloy was paying a visit yesterday to a house adjoining the one where his sister used to live. She wanted to know the news of her sister.

"Have they sent her away?" she asked with a laugh.

Not the least pitiful part of the history of Agnes Taylor in this city is a letter which was shown yesterday from the girl's sister in Portglenone, near Belfast, Ireland. The sister wrote advising Agnes "to keep away from Roby and Jane Anne." She said that she was sorry to hear they were quarreling and hoped the news would never get out at Portglenone. Then the letter went on to thank Agnes "for sending home the money," and said that Jane Anne had not written for a long time.

The tone of this letter bears out the intimate account of Agnes by her friend, Mrs. McMurray. Agnes continually denied herself things which she needed to send money home to her family when the rent came due. She has now only $16 left in the world, which Mrs. McMurray is keeping for her.

"Never did she do one thing that a good girl should not do," said Mrs. McMurray. When she was arrested two weeks ago, Agnes gave up her position. She had stayed around the house and waited for some sort of peaceful settlement. Just before last Wednesday, when the immigration officials came for her, a position as a milliner's apprentice had been offered to her by one of the best shops in New York.

A DAY OF THRILLS AT CONEY.

Mouse Bites Lion Tamer, Elephant Rampages, and Crowds See Two Fires

There were two fires and half a dozen small accidents yesterday to interest the crowd of 200,000 persons who visited Coney Island. Most of the crowd seemed to gather at a small blaze in a boarding house at Sheepshead Bay Road and Park Place, and at 3 o'clock, an hour afterward, at a small blaze in the rear of an "African Dodger" entertainment in the Bowery, near Jones's Walk.

The fire there is supposed to have been caused by some one tossing a cigarette into a heap of rubbish behind the amusement place, perhaps while riding in one of the cars of a scenic railway near by. The blaze burned briskly and gave off a dense smoke. The crowds hindered the firemen, and before they were able to get lines of hose directed at the blaze it had made good headway. Once the police had cleared a path for them, however, the firemen made quick work of the blaze.

Most of the accidents were minor affairs, but 5-year-old Sigmund Rosenberg of 208 East Ninety-eighth Street had his right foot broken when he thrust it from a car of the Giant Racer, in Surf Avenue. His foot struck an upright supporting the tracks.

Miss Mary Lucey was run down by an automobile in Ocean Parkway at Surf Avenue. She had several ribs broken and was taken to the Coney Island Hospital in a serious condition.

The absence of "Doc" Campbell from the Motordrome, in Surf Avenue, where motor cycles are driven at racing speed around a small saucer track, was found to be due to a serious accident which he suffered Saturday noon just before the show opened. A tire on his motor cycle exploded, and he was thrown and dragged several times around the track. His nose and several ribs were broken and he was badly bruised.

There was an unusually big crowd at Luna, and Judy, the elephant which was loaned to the society circus at the Crescent Athletic Club, signalized her return by raiding a popcorn stand. Before they could stop her Judy had eaten thirteen dollars and seventy-three cents' worth of the product.

Mlle. Millie Spellman, who has a trained animal show in Luna, was almost prevented from giving her exhibition with lions, wolves, and other fierce animals because a mouse bit her in the leg. Mlle. Spellman was in her dressing room when the accident occurred, and was so overcome that for a time she could not go on with her act. She said herself it was worse than being bitten by a wolf.

KILLED IN PRISON MUTINY.

Two Other San Quentin Convicts Wounded in Food Riots.

SAN QUENTIN Cal. June 9.—A continuation to-day of the food strike begun yesterday in San Quentin Prison developed into a riot in the general mess hall as a result of which one prisoner was shot and killed and two were wounded.

H. L. Lynwood, a naval prisoner serving a term of six and a half years for desertion and impersonating an officer, was killed. A negro serving twenty years for robbery was shot through the hand, and another man was shot in the leg by a glancing bullet.

Nineteen hundred prisoners were sitting down to dinner when 200 or 300 of the men began a concerted demonstration. Not content with voicing their protests with shrieks and cat calls, they began throwing dishes and food. Some made a rush for the kitchen and began hurling heavy pots and pans around the room. The men were driven out with hose spouting steam, several of the rioters being severely burned, and the prison bell was sounded with the "lock up" signal.

At one of the three exits from the dining hall several of the rioters gathered and endeavored to block egress, their purpose being to prolong the demonstration. Here Lynwood, one of the leaders of the mutineers, was shot down and the other two were wounded.

The prisoners were quickly marched to their cells, but even after being locked up continued their shrieks of defiance.

ADMITS HE HID GIRL'S BODY IN DARK CELLAR

But Joseph McKenna, Arrested for Murder, Insists He Did Not Strangle Sigrid.

LIVED IN THE SAME HOUSE

Says She Fell from His Arms on Her Head, and in a Panic of Fear He Hid the Corpse and Ran Away.

Joseph J. McKenna, a young ne-er-do-well, who deserted from the army five years ago and who served six months on Blackwell's Island for larceny, according to the police, confessed yesterday that it was he who hid the body of 6-year-old Sigrid Eckstrom in a coal bin in the cellar of 1,077 Ogden Avenue, the Bronx, last Thursday night. He insisted that the child had slipped from his arms while he was playing with her in the entry way of her home at 1,075 Ogden Avenue, and had fallen on her head. He said he thought she was dead, and that he had become panic-stricken.

"If the little girl was strangled," he declared in answer to a question of Assistant District Attorney Theron Strong, "I did not do it intentionally. I had no reason to hurt her."

McKenna was very much excited and seemed somewhat deranged. He smoked cigarettes incessantly, and had been drinking up to the time of his arrest early yesterday morning. He admitted that it was he who had hidden the little girl's body only after he had been questioned by Mr. Strong, Coroner Shongut, Acting Captain Price, and several detectives of the Bronx.

Several little girls testified in the Captain's room in the Morrisania Station, where the hearing was held, that McKenna also had given them pennies, and then Coroner Shongut adjourned the hearing so that the little ones might visit the Eckstrom home, whence the little girl's body was carried at 1:30 to be buried in a Long Island Cemetery. The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. Oscar Blodau, pastor of the Swedish Mission Church at 308 West 139th Street.

McKenna, after his confession, was held without bail by Coroner Shongut to await the outcome of the inquest, which will be held on Wednesday afternoon. He was taken from the Morrisania Station to the Tombs.

Suspicion was directed against McKenna by Sigrid's five-year-old brother Edwin, who gave a good description of the man who had given his sister a penny a few days before her death. The search for McKenna showed that he had not spent Friday night in the home of his brother-in-law, Alexander Carroll, who lives in the same house with the Eckstroms, and it was Carroll who found him on Saturday in New Rochelle. It learned that McKenna had been arrested in Mount Vernon at 1:30 o'clock Friday morning, charged with vagrancy, but had been discharged, and then had gone to the homes of two sisters living in New Rochelle.

Carroll persuaded him to return to the home of his father, Daniel McKenna, at 2,140 Southern Boulevard, the Bronx. Detectives were waiting for him there and arrested him.

At that time he denied all knowledge of the little girl's death, and was held without bail as a material witness until the charge against him was changed yesterday.

CALL BURNS IN DARROW TRIAL

Detective Expected to Testify to Attempts to Corrupt Witnesses.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 9.—Detective William J. Burns arrived to-day to testify for the prosecution in the trial of Clarence S. Darrow, charged with jury bribery.

Burns declined to discuss the nature of the testimony he expects to give, but it is thought it will consist of evidence concerning the alleged attempts by the McNamara defense to corrupt witnesses who had been summoned to testify for the prosecution in that case.

The Darrow trial will be resumed to-morrow afternoon, with Bert H. Franklin again on the stand.

THOUGHT WAVES AND CRIME.

Crank's Theory Upheld in Jesting Government Report.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—An official report has just been made to the Department of Justice on the question whether its officials are inciting crime by disseminating thought waves.

Some time ago a correspondent who purported to be a former college professor wrote a forty-page letter to the President, complaining that the recurrence of crime waves in this country was due to malign thought impulses hurtled about by detectives of the Department of Justice, who thereby influenced the weak-minded to commit crimes against their will. The detectives, according to the writer, would then issue forth and arrest these innocent lawbreakers, in this way working up a reputation for activity and efficiency.

The writer also stated that he had volunteered some testimony before the Senate committee which was recently investigating the third degree, and that his views were greeted with mirth.

"They laughed, Mr. President," he wrote; "they laughed, Sir, at the profundity of their own ineptitude."

The correspondent's letter was referred to the Department of Justice, where it came to the hands of Wrisley Brown, special assistant to the Attorney General and Government counsel in the impeachment proceedings against Judge Archbald. Brown says in his burlesque memorandum:

"After careful reflection I concur in the psychical theorems herein deduced by the complainant. His conclusions regarding the auto-suggestion of crime are fully borne out by science and the history of human experience. Its insidious effect upon the mind has a pronounced tendency to bring on a criticism of the will power combined with a choreic condition of the faculties.

"In some cases it has even been known to induce katatonia or some more serious dissociation of the mental elements and furibund development such as, for instance, confusional encephalo-malacia.

"The application of the third degree annihilates the inhibitory powers of the average victim and often plunges him into a state of volitional hypnosis, thereby breaking down the fundamental doctrine of free agency."

SAVOIE BRINGS STOWAWAYS.

Three Are Found When Lifeboats Are Inspected the First Day Out.

The French liner Savoie arrived yesterday from Havre with 206 cabin passengers, 600 steerage, and mails. She also brought three young Frenchmen as stowaways—Eugene Bolat, 17, an optician's assistant; Emilio Garriquez, 17, a telegrapher, and Charles Coussaint, 19, a plumber. The three young men met in Paris and started to make a tour of the world without expense to themselves.

They were found the first day out from Havre in No. 4 lifeboat on the port side. First Officer Chapon said that now under the new rules the lifeboats are examined every day at sea, and this has struck a hard blow against stowaways. Formerly men could live in a boat for days in some ships without being discovered, but now they would be sure of discovery the first day at sea, he said.
